OPEN NEW BIDS ON DISPOSAL PLANT

TAKE FOUR VOTES BEFORE DECISION ON WATER FINANCE

New bids on the sewage disposal plant as submitted to the village trustees at their regular meeting Tuesday night were not much lower than the first bids, but it was found that by careful utilization of funds the present bids might be acceptable. The final decision as to the acceptance of the bids was left open, though, until a special meeting to be held tonight.

Alternate bids were presented with the Geo. D. Hardin company of Chicago ranging from $83,755.10 to $82,880.10; the Fred Lorenz company from $83,510.80 to $82,790.80, and the Sides Construction company, low, bidding $77,829.00 to $76,808.00.

While these bids were still much higher than the original estimates on the job, Attorney Lewis recommended a method of financing the project that was practical and may be accepted by the council.

Beginning with the total sum of $65,554 upon which the PWA grant was based, the outright grant being $20,000, the rest to be supplied by bonds, purchased by the government, the attorney added the $6,500 in cash now on hand in the disposal plant fund, the proceeds of taxes levied for this purpose, and then the probable 60 per cent, or $3,000, to be received from this year's tax levy, bringing the total up to $75,054. He then noted the surplus bonds above those purchased by the government, but voted for the sewage levy. These bonds, with an approximate total of $9,000, might be used to pay the fees of the engineer and attorney and part to the contractor.

In this manner the attorney pointed out the project could be financed at the present bids. A final vote will be taken at a special meeting to be held Thursday night. The matter will have been placed before the PWA officials and have their decision by that time.

Water Bonds

A contract was submitted to the council by the LaRocca company of Chicago on the sale of water revenue bonds in the amount of $70,000. These bonds bearing interest at 4½ per cent.

Originally this issue of bonds was to be in the amount of $80,000 but with the receipt of the $17,551 grant from the WPA it had seemed advisable to pare this amount down to $70,000. The discussion that followed the submission of the contract for sale of the bonds, brought out the ideas that the original amount should be issued, providing in this way funds to retire all outstanding indebtedness of the water department including power bills, etc., and start the new system with a clean slate.

Four votes were taken on the amount of the bond issue to be sold and after three lost votes, the attorney suggested a compromise of $75,000 which received a "yes" vote.

The contract submitted by the LaRocca company designated the amount to be set aside from water revenue each month for the purpose of retiring the bonds, and also a definite amount for repairs to the system. The council recommended a few minor changes to be made in the contract.

Several changes in the collection system used by the water department were suggested by the bond house, among them that the town be divided into three sections, collection being made by section each month. Another suggestion was that the minimum rate be billed each month with the meter readings every third month or quarter.

NEW REALTY COMPANY LOCATES IN LANSING

The formation of a new realty company to be known as the Donald Realty corporation, with offices in the Lansing bank building was made this week. Personnel of the new company will be August P. Sargol, Lerona Leiferman and Alfred Capitani.

While the company is listed as dealers in real estate, rumor has it that it contemplates the development of much of the vacant property of the village, with its chief object the erection of moderate priced homes.

ACROBATIC HONORS FOR KATHERYN BERTRAM

Twelve year old Kathryn Bertram, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bertram of Community street, was the proud possessor of the first honor award presented by the Dorothy Jo Bellin school of dancing for acrobatic accomplishments.

Kathryn was the first one of the class in acrobatic to master a very difficult flip flop and for her accomplishment received the cash prize of $3.

MISTAKEN SIGNS ADD TO COURAGE

William H. Winterhoff and his companions, Art Mason and Paul Sass, piled out of their car at Ridge Road and Oakley avenue Friday evening after feeling a severe jolt on the rear end of the car, to find themselves confronted with an unusual display of courage.

Basing his claims on the fact that the sign gave him the right of way on Oakley avenue against Ridge Road, Nick Biesboer had rammed the Winterhoff machine and was willing to fight for his rights. But seeing the odds against him and getting a better view of the stop sign he reconsidered his decision to lick the whole pack and poodle and allowed the erstwhile village president and his party to continue on their way with only a badly dented back fender to attest to the experience.

Monthly collections in some form will be necessary as the Hammond contract will require this.

It was estimated that the new water rate would not exceed $24 a year.

Henry Street Bill

A bill presented by the S. G. Hayes company for the paving of Henry street showed a difference of $1,500 from the original appropriation, making the total for the job $3,500 instead of $2,000. This difference was explained by the fact that larger stone and more asphalt had been used than was at first planned.

This difference in material was the result of the request made by the village to the state that this be a better job than was done on Indiana avenue last year. The change in specifications was approved by the state and the work done on that basis. The bill as presented was held for approval of the finance committee. It is to be paid from gas tax funds.

Routine

The finance committee turned in a most satisfactory report, stating that the expenditures of the village for the first six months of the present administration had been kept within the appropriation. In other words that the budget balanced.

Police Magistrate Sherrow reported a total of $181 collected in fines from August 13 to October 19.

GAME MEAT FOR ANNUAL FEAST

Munster's annual community dinner, to be held December 4, will have about 500 pounds of game meat, bear and venison. This extra treat was assured by the efforts of Marshal Ed Bennet, Henry Harder, chairman of the town board; Henry Daugherty, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce and Clair Strockman, town trustee.

This quartet of local notables returned from a hunting trip to Big Bay, Mich., this week with the community dinner in the bag. The deer and bear shot by the quartet weigh about 250 pounds each.

This group of girls was recently organized under the guardianship of Miss Jean Henderson. Miss Henderson has also assumed the guardianship of a younger group, the name of which has not as yet been chosen.

DUTY'S CALL IS USELESS ALARM

That flying figure down along the railroad tracks Thursday afternoon was Tony Koselke, local postmaster, hightailing it over to the fire station to join his comrades in the ride around to the burning automobile in front of the bank building across from the post office.

Of course Tony and the rest of the boys had no idea where the fire was until they reached the station, or how serious it might be.

We have a hunch that Harold Clark might have started to the fire station when he saw the flames and became the hero of the hour with his own fire extinguisher.

At any rate the fire was in the seat of an automobile parked in front of the bank building and was of minor importance due to the presence of mind of Mr. Clark who had it out before the fire truck arrived. The blaze was discovered by Mildred Sass. It was evidently caused by a spark from a cigar or cigarette, and did very little damage.

CHINA MISSIONARY SPEAKS IN MUNSTER

Rev. Harry A. Dykstra of Jukao, China, will give a lecture in the Christian Reformed church of Munster Friday evening, November 22. His topic is "Is China fighting the battle of the Nations?"

"OLD SOL" DRIVES AWAY SNOW CLOUDS

Making one of his few appearances within the last two weeks, Old Sol today quickly banished the season's first snow fall. Early risers this morning were greeted by a light blanket of snow, the first this fall. Reports were that snow was falling late Tuesday night, but no evidence of it remained the next morning, so today's blanket is the first official snow of the season.

Memory of a Squirrel Is Honored

Standing in solemn dignity adjacent to a statue of Beethoven and a majestic figure memorializing Los Angeles' soldier dead, a bronze plaque was erected in Pershing square, Los Angeles, in honor of "Benny, a Squirrel." For many years Benny was one of the most popular and widely known of the denizens of Pershing square. A year ago, while on one of his trips across a busy street, Benny was killed by a speeding motorist. Friends buried his broken body in Pershing square and a mock orange tree was planted to mark his resting place. Through local city officials, a bronze plaque was engraved in honor of the late squirrel.

OCEANS AND HILLS SLOW DOWN EARTH; DAYS LENGTHENING

French astro-physicists are completing a series of calculations which prove this world of ours is slowing down, like a wobbly top, as it spins around its polar axis.

The loss of speed is estimated by scientists at the Meudon observatory, near Paris, at one-tenth thousandth of a second a month at the present time. "which means that in 1,000,000 years our 24-hour day will be lengthened to a 41-hour day.

This phenomenon is caused partly by the fact that the earth is losing the perfect streamlined curves of its early days and is becoming wrinkled with mountains and volcanoes which impede its whirling.

The main factor, however, is stated to be found in tidal movements. Working under the combined influence of sun and moon, oceans bulge out and act as brakes on the rotation of the earth. Another important cause is found in geological disturbances brought about by the shifting of internal masses. This flinging about of the world's contents like so much loose baggage in a freight car, tends to detract from the constancy of the earth's spinning.

Calculations to date show this loss of speed increases progressively so that 100 years hence the earth's rotation will have suffered a loss of 18 seconds, and within two centuries, one minute and 12 seconds. In 2,000 years it will be one hour and 50 minutes behind its merry-go-round schedule. This lengthening of the day is explained by the longer time it would take for the earth to complete one single turn on its polar axis.

The majority of these calculations are based on the studies of tidal actions on planets and their satellites carried out by the astro-physicist, M. Antoniad, and his collaborators at the Meudon observatory.

This clocking of the speed of the globe's rotation is entirely apart from computations regarding the changes in time that it takes the earth to revolve around the sun every year.—Detroit News.

Possession Demands Our Service, Lest We Perish

The only hope of perfecting human relationship is in accordance with the law of service under which men are so solicitous about what they shall give. Yet people are entitled to the rewards of their industry. What they earn is theirs, no matter how small or how great. But the possession of property carries the obligation to use it in a larger service.

For a man not to recognize the truth, not to be obedient to law, to render allegiance to the state, is for him to be at war with his own nature, to commit suicide. That is why "the wages of sin is death." Unless we live rationally, we perish physically, naturally, spiritually.

"DEATH AFTER DARK"

"Of 36,000 motor fatalities last year, 20,000 occurred at night," writes Governor Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey, in an article in Liberty entitled "Death After Dark."

"The total economic waste of night-time automobile accidents is estimated at nearly one and a half billion dollars.

"Sixty-nine per cent of those killed are pedestrians.

"As a nation, we have failed to grasp the fact that as the sun goes down, so must our speed. We are simply driving too fast for our eyes."

Night driving, Governor Hoffman points out, involves three definite factors, each of which contributes to the hazard: 1, Overdriving our headlights; 2, Slow perception due to poor illumination; 3, The night pedestrian hazard. The first factor is probably the most important, inasmuch as it affects the other two, Governor Hoffman says that the average man is fortunate if he can see 100 feet clearly with his headlights. That is less than the distance required to stop from a speed of 35 miles per hour, on good pavement with first class tires and brakes. If the night driver is traveling 60, not an uncommon speed on our highways today, that 100 feet of visibility will have been passed by the time he is able to even substantially lower his speed.

Thousands of us are driving 50 and 60 miles an hour in cars equipped with 30 mile headlights. One solution to that is better illumination for streets and highways—irrefutable figures, based on extensive tests, show that the saving in economic waste, to say nothing of the human waste, pays the cost of good lighting many times over. But it will be a long time before the average highway is lighted at all—and in the meantime, the only solution is to drive moderately if you wish to avoid "death after dark."

WHAT DO THEY WANT?

At least two newspapers of critical tendencies toward the Roosevelt regime have played up prominently an account of intimate and searching questions which investigators for the Resettlement Administration ask applicants for homesteads in the projected co-operative communities. The feeling apparently is that this reflects in some way upon the altruism and solicitude for the downtrodden that are supposed to motivate the undertaking.

These and other critics, on the other hand have flailed the Federal relief administration and its local corresponding units for allegedly pouring out taxpayers' cash to the worthless and undeserving. They have also taken pains to chronicle the difficulties and failings of efforts to help people work out their own salvation as at Reedsville and in the Matanuska Valley.

It might be noted that the resettlement projects in particular are efforts to help people who when rightly placed can be expected to support themselves, repay their obligation and get along well in the communities so formed. Hence it is of some consequence whether families have handicaps or peculiarities that make them a subject for more direct relief if any, or that would expose the plans to new charges of impracticalism.

Undoubtedly many mistakes have been made, some of them grave, both in relief and in rural rehabilitation. But doublebarreled and crossfire criticism which snipes at the social workers and planners whichever way they jump gives rise to two questions: Is the objection really that the opponents do not want anything done by the Government for the unfortunate and underprivileged? Or is it that they do not like to see these things done by someone else instead of themselves? If neither of these, then it would seem reasonable for the critics to say more clearly what they think should be done.

YOU DO READ THE ADS

A recent remark made by a local woman, we think should be challenged:

"I never read the ads" We believe that we can prove that she does read the ads and that they influence every thing that she buys and she is the buyer for several persons, typical of the entire village and nation. Recent years have brought to light the fact that women do most of the buying of the country.

Advertising is the greatest educational influence at work in America today. Your every day living is more effected by the advertisements appearing in the current newspapers and periodicals than by the history, English or geography taught your children in schools. Why? Because you learned about almost every thing you use in daily living through advertising.

How many people would be eating canned soup, driving a car, listening in on the radio, using an electric washing machine, enjoying the movies, or any of our modern conveniences of living had they not been placed before them by way of advertising.

Maybe you don't sit down and conscientiously read every advertisement in your newspapers when they come in but you see them and the thing that you see constantly becomes a part of your life.

Thousands of our modern conveniences would still be luxuries for the few had not advertising put them within the reach of the many by educating the public to their use and so reducing the price by turnover to the point where Mrs. Average Housewife or Mr. Common Man can have them.

O, Yes! We all read the ads and profit by them.

LIBERTY'S GUARANTEE

The people of this country should each day offer thanks to the framers of our Constitution, the document which guarantees freedom of speech and freedom of the press. This is the greatest protection a free people have against the crushing hand of officialism, bureaucracy, dictatorship and destruction of personal and property rights, and life itself, as we have seen occur in foreign lands not blessed with a constitution such as ours.

As one man, our people should resent any program to tamper with or weaken the basic principles of the United States constitution.

OLD AGE PENSION INFORMATION

Individuals wishing to make application for old age pensions in Illinois must make applications through the State Department of Public Welfare Sveinbjorn Johnson, Director of the National Emergency Councils for Illinois said this week.

A large part of the Emergency Councils' activities is the giving of information to the public regarding activities of the various Federal agencies and the passage of the federal Social Security Act and the more recent State Pension bill has brought about a demand for information on pension applications, Johnson said.

Information is collected for the National Emergency Council through its division of applications and information, and is available to the public through the various State Councils. The Illinois office is in Chicago.

The Social Security Act does not make provision for the federal government to pay old-age pensions directly to the individual, but provides that the federal government shall aid the states in paying such pensions by meeting one-half the cost.

THE STORY FROM THE OPENING CHAPTER

At the inquest into the death of John Mason, banker, Jean, daughter of Campo Ragland, owner of the Bar Hook ranch, where Mason met death surreptitiously passes to Kentucky Jones the bullet which had killed Mason, she having abstracted it from the evidence. Kentucky goes to work on the Bar Hook ranch. The Mason verdict is accidental death. Bob Elliott, owner of the "88" ranch, adjoining the Bar Hook, drives his cattle on the Bar Hook land. Lee Bishop, Ragland's ranch boss, expostulates, and Bill McCord, Elliott's foreman, insults him. Bishop and Jones are astounded by Ragland's indifference to Elliott's action. Jones tells Jean Elliott knows she purloined the bullet at the inquest, which Jones has got rid of. Her reaction mystifies him. Zack Sanders, cook at the Bar Hook ranch, is found dead, murdered. Sheriff Hopper announces his knowledge that Mason also was murdered. In a gun fight with riders of the "88" ranch Jim Humphreys, Bar Hook cowboy, is killed, and Billy Petersen wounded. Jones sends for fighting cowmen, but Ragland countermands the order. Jones seeks to trace the ownership of a gun found on Zack Sanders, as a bearing on the mystery. Jean sells him her share in the Bar Hook ranch, thus giving him a free hand with Elliott. Jones finds proof that Jean has concealed evidence connected with Mason's death. A gunsmith whom he had engaged to trace Sanders' gun says he sold the weapon to a Bar Hook cowboy, Joe St. Marie. Jones questions St. Marie without avail. Lee Bishop goes "gunning" for McCord. Knowing Bishop will not be given fair play, Jones sets out after him. The foreman is shot from ambush. Jones carries him to shelter

"But when you found him," Kentucky pointed out, "there was no snow under him; proving he was killed before the snow began to fall."

"I can't account for that. Maybe the snow under him melted, or something."

This seemed unlikely to Kentucky, but he did not interrupt.

"I was a couple furlongs away," Bishop admitted, continuing. "But don't tell me I made a mistake. I mind how John Mason used to sit, kind of half crooked in the saddle; and I mind the round of his shoulders as he sat his horse, and the tilt of his hat. I'd know him any distance, out of a thousand men."

There was something peculiarly familiar about Lee Bishop's claim of recognition. Suddenly Kentucky knew why. He had heard Joe St. Marie use almost the same words in explaining to Jean Ragland, the night they found Zack Sanders, that he had seen a ghost.

"It isn't hardly likely," Kentucky offered speculatively, "that you'd mistake that pinto horse Mason rode that day."

"They was wrong about that," Bishop said promptly. "Mason wasn't riding no pinto horse. He was riding a little blood bay pony—an 88 pony they call These Spot."

"Tell me one more thing," Kentucky said. "Did this—did Mason see you?"

"He ought to have seen me. I was in plain sight. But he didn't answer my wave."

Kentucky rose and went about his work of keeping up the fires. By the signal fire he stood listening for a long time, suspicious of small sounds far away; but he could make certain of no indication of nearby human life. He went back to Lee Bishop.

"Are you there, Kentucky?"

"Kentucky, I'm sorry I never told that. If only I'd told some people about it, it would clear you. But—us. It any way you can."

"You never told anybody at all?"

"Just one person in the world, Kentucky; and that isn't liable to do you much good."

"Who was that?"

"Jean Ragland. . . . She'll back up your word if you tell 'em what I said. But I don't know as it will carry much weight. Anybody can see that she's dead gone on you, Kentucky. Most likely they'll discount what she says in your favor, on that account."

Kentucky Jones said gently, "You're wrong there, Lee."

"You're a fool if you think I am. I told her about seeing Mason, and she made me promise not to tell anybody else. I disremember what I thought was her reason for that; it seemed a reasonable thing to ask, at the time."

Kentucky Jones sucked in his breath through his teeth. "Lee," he said slowly, "you sure you got this straight?"

"Sure, Kentucky. I wouldn't disagree Old Iron—"

"I don't mean that, Lee. I mean—you told Jean about seeing this, and she told you not to tell any one?"

"You beat me, Kentucky. How the h— would a man get a thing like that mixed up?"

"All right, Lee."

"What's the matter with you, Kentucky?"

"There's a link or two missing yet, Lee," Kentucky said. "But I'm dead sure in my own mind, now."

"What are you talking about?"

"You've got me the killer of Mason," Kentucky said.

Lee Bishop started, winced, and settled back again, more limp and more still than before. "You mean," he said at last, "you know who killed Mason?"

"Don't you?"

"I— Listen!"

They were silent for a long moment while Lee Bishop lay with closed eyes, as if the life had gone out of him once and for all.

"There's a horse coming," Bishop said at last.

Kentucky listened, but could hear nothing. He got up and walked down the gully, past the signal fire, to a place from which he could sight across the flat snow to the canyon narrows. Here the freighthigh was no longer in his eyes, and the small whisper of the embers could not confuse his ears; and presently he was certain that he distinguished the slow trample of a walking horse. He listened for what seemed a long time while the sound came sometimes distinct and unmistakable, and again died away until he was half convinced that the rider had turned and drawn off.

Then the sound of the walking hoofs suddenly became sharp and close at hand. Three hundred yards away Kentucky made out the movement of a shadow in shadows, and knew that the rider was sitting his horse in the mouth of the notch. Kentucky Jones freed his rifle's safety catch, carefully, without any click of metal.

For nearly five minutes the rider in the notch sat motionless, and Jones knew that their visitor was watching the signal fire, trying to make out figures near it, or other sign of what the builders of the fire intended.

The rider moved out of the mouth of the notch at last, turned uncertainly to the right, and began to skirt the foot of the canyon wall so slowly that for a little while Kentucky Jones was inclined to think that there was no rider there at all, but only an unridden horse wandering about in search of its bunch. Moving slowly it circled the signal fire, as if trying to pass at the greatest possible distance. Then the pony passed before a drift of gullied snow which stood like a panel of white set into the gray rock; and against this Kentucky Jones saw the unmistakable silhouette of the figure in the saddle.

The rider turned now, cutting back to circle the signal fire more closely; and at last, as if suddenly impatient, turned directly toward the fire itself and rode to the edge of its circle of light. At a distance of no more than fifty feet, Kentucky Jones slid his rifle over the lip of the coulee and brought it to bear upon the mounted figure.

Then the rider turned; and the freighthigh showed him Jean Ragland's face.

"Hello, Jean," he said.

Her horse jerked as if it would shy, but its rider sat steady, leaning down to peer into the shadows.

Jean called out sharply, "Is that you, Kentucky? Are you hurt?"

"They hit Lee Bishop, Jean."

She slid out of the saddle, tossing the reins over her pony's head, and came to the edge of the coulee.

"Where's Lee?"

"Drop down and I'll take you to him." He held up his arms and she let herself drop into them, but freed herself immediately.

"Is he hit bad?"

He whispered, "He can hear us from here, I think. I don't know but what they've finished him. Jean He's shot in the side of the back and Lord knows where the bullet stopped. You shouldn't have come here—don't you know that?"

"Somebody had to come. Campo—my father is back from Waterman; but Harry Wilson quit when Campo wouldn't bring out more riders. You and Campo and I are all that's left. And now poor Lee—"

He led her own the cut to where Bishop lay. The range boss opened his eyes and turned his face toward her. "Is that you, Jean?"

She dropped on her knees beside him. "Yes, Lee."

"Didn't know but what I might be hearing things. Where's Campo?"

"He's making a sweep of the upper Bench trail. Lee, you must be plumb frozen."

"Pretty near," Bishop admitted.

Jean slipped off her coat, and carefully wrapped Bishop's legs. Then she scrambled out of the cut, ran to her horse and, loosening the cinch, jerked her blankets from under the saddle. When this was placed to suit her, she made ready to go.

"It's sure a shot-to-pieces outfit; you bought into, Kentucky."

"That deal is off," he told her. "I own no share in the Bar Hook, nor any part of a share."

Jean looked at him but there was no expression in her face, nor in her voice as she answered. "So you're quitting, too."

"No, not quite yet," Kentucky told her grimly. "I'm just going ahead in a little different way than we figured I was going to; that's all."

Jean dropped beside Lee Bishop and for a long time studied the mask of his face, yellow in the freighthigh. He seemed asleep. Irrepressible tears appeared on Jean's cheeks, glistening in the light of the fire. She bent over Lee Bishop and kissed him. "Good-by, Lee," she said softly. "I'll be back pretty quick."

Lee Bishop smiled faintly. "Take your time, kid."

Jean caught Kentucky's wrist and led him a little way down the cut. "Do you think there's any chance of moving him?"

"I don't know as we better try. Jean. When you get back to the house, phone to Waterman for Doc Hopper. Then pack a horse and come back. Get hold of a tent if there's any on the place, and all the bedrolls that come handy, and grub, and bandages, and stuff. You know what we'll need."

Jean Ragland sealed the side of the cut, re-cinched her saddle, and rode off at a sharp trot.

Lee Bishop said, "There goes a great girl, Kentucky. You're lucky, all right."

"Lucky? Me?"

"She'd ride her horse square off the rim," Lee Bishop said. "If you told her to." He was talking in a queer and somehow childish tone of voice which Kentucky had never heard him use. "Listen, Kentucky, Get this—can you hear me all right?"

"I can hear you, Lee."

"You're worse off than you think Kentucky. Campo believes you killed Mason."

Kentucky said slowly, "I don't know but what Campo has almighty good reason to know better than that, Lee."

"What if he has?" Lee demanded. "What you don't know is, he's been gathering up stuff against you—tracing guns, and the like of that. In a pinch he'll turn on you, Campo. Will a pinch he'll turn on you. She believes in you; and she'll stand by you."

"The pinch will come quick, now," Kentucky said. "But she'll not be with me, Lee."

Lee Bishop said in a curious heart out of her, if you needed it. She's got a faith in you that you don't have for her."

"Faith?" Kentucky repeated savagely. "If she'd trusted me only half way, only quarter way, and I wouldn't be sitting here tonight."

Lee Bishop looked at Kentucky a long time, and his mind seemed to be turning vague. "You ain't licked, Kentucky," he said at last in a weak voice. "You can beat this game yet."

"Sure I'll beat it," Kentucky said.

"Take this horse, and the mule, and such of the stuff as you need. I don't need to tell you where to go or how to get there, nor how to get along; but do as I say! Go a long way, and go fast, and lose yourself; and never come back until some day this ghastly thing is over with and forgotten!"

Kentucky Jones stared at her a long time, studying her face; but her eyes did not flinch from his. At last a crooked one-sided smile changed his mouth.

"I know this is a terrible sacrifice for you," Jean said. "I wouldn't ask you this, Kentucky. I swear I wouldn't, if I wasn't so positive that there's no other way. Believe this—I'll be your friend, always; it may be later that I can help you, and send your money to you, or something like that. That will work out later. All I can say now is that I'd rather be dead than sitting here telling you this; but there isn't any other way."

"Why do you ask this?" Kentucky said curiously.

"You've got to do what I say," she told him passionately, "without any question of why about it."

"You hardly expected me to do that, I think," he told her.

Jean cried out sharply, "Don't! Take the horse and go, Kentucky, as you love me—but you don't love me; I know that."

"I think," he said, "just now it doesn't matter a whole lot who loves who, or who doesn't."

There was a touch of hysteria in her voice as she answered him. "No, not to you—I think you don't care anything about anybody in the world!"

"God help the man who does," he said. "As for taking that horse and making a run of it, I'm sorry not to do something that you ask. But I can't imagine anything on the face of the earth that would make me do that now."

"Then," she said quickly, "I'll tell you why you must. My father—my father—!" It seemed for a moment as if she were unable to go on. But she pulled herself together and spoke evenly, her words distinct and quick. "You know by this time why Bob Elliott is swamping the Bar Hook range. You have eyes that see things—I don't think anyone can hide from you what a thing means. You can't make me think that you don't know why Elliott has no fear of Campo, nor the Bar Hook."

"No," he said slowly, "I wouldn't pretend that I can't see that."

New Fall Sports Clothes
Go in for Rowdy Colorings
 You must be casual in your sports clothes. You can let your fancy run wild if you have faith in your sense of color. For it's all a question of color this season.

Jack Rose. Its very name is full of pep. And it's very full of color. A red, red raspberry. Vital—and alive and simply magnificent with the darker wools and tweeds.

And maize! Fancy meeting it in the fall. It's a new maize, though, very giddy, quite yellow and very striking with your-browns and grays.

From there we go to the other extreme and choose black as a favorite. It's to be tops when it comes to pull-overs, particularly when worn with a gaudy cardigan. Just picture this outfit. A small gray skirt, felt hat to match, a black slipover and a yellow cardigan to finish it off.

What SHE TOLD WORN-OUT HUSBAND

She could have reproached him for his fits of temper—his "all in" complaints. But wisely she saw in his frequent colds, his "fagged out," "on edge" condition the very trouble she herself had whipped. Constipation! The very morning after taking NR (Nature's Remedy), as she advised, he felt like himself again—keenly alert, peppy, cheerful. NR—the safe, dependable, all-vegetable laxative and corrective works gently, thoroughly, naturally. It stimulates the eliminative tract to complete, regular functioning. Non-habit-forming. Try a box tonight, 25c—at druggists.

PATTERN 2386

Anne Adams 2386

If you're hesitating between a tailored or a dressy frock for fall, why not combine the best features of both in this smart two-piece model. An unusual round collar has deep shoulder proportions, parting in back to allow for an opening. The sleeves may draw to a tight close at the wrist, or stop below the elbow as in the small sketch. You've satin, crepe or one of the new plaid cottons or wools to choose from, but remember, two fabrics are smarter than one this year.

Pattern 2386 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 takes 2 1/2 yards 54 inch fabric and 3/4 yard 39 inch contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Rebirth of Old Ideas Is Seen in Latest Fashions

This seems to be the renaissance season in fashions. Reports from style reader indicate a surprising rebirth of old ideas. Black afternoon dresses, brightened by large plaques of rhinestones, once great favorites, have come back strong in couture showings this fall after practically disappearing from the fashion for a long while. The simple bead, another old-time favorite, figures greatly in fall dress plans. Many dresses use these beads in a fresh manner, black on black and in regularly spaced motifs.

Bench Buttons
 Rectangular buttons of catlin with slats resembling a park bench are one of the new designs for sports suits.

Whims of Fashion

Initiated jewelry refuses to be ousted from the mode. Silver frogs trim a white and silver moire renaissance dress. Flowers continue important for evening in many collections.

Stylish fur-topped carriage boots are tripping into the limelight.

Be natural and casual is the slogan of the well-dressed college girl this year.

Wide straps, an inch or more, buckling on the side, are new shoe style notes.

Floor-length dinner gowns with long sleeves and high necklines are important again.

Fur hats, or fur-trimmed ones, seem best with the fur-trimmed suit or coat, rather than with the fur coat.

They call it the "Musketeer"—a dashing gauntlet of suede that is a perfect copy of Alexandrine's famous glove.

Much counter space is given to jeweled combs, both large and small, to keep curls in place at back or either side of the head.

Purple—or more specifically the purplish tones—are once more introduced in the collections and appear to be meeting with success.

The harem skirt idea is liked especially by women who choose either black satin or crepe skirts, the tops of which are in contrast.

Many velvet muffs are shown both for daytime and evening and several have pockets for accessories, one stretching out like a concertina to form a scarf.

Housewife's Idea Box

To Store Laces
 If you have laces which you do not intend to use for a long time, do not just lay them in a box or drawer until wanted. They are likely to be ruined by dry rot. To prevent this, wrap the laces in waxed paper. Then store them away in a box. They will keep very nicely in this way.

Body of Caruso Lies in State; Embalmed in 1921

Because his friends and admirers in his native Italy could not bear to think of the body of Enrico Caruso moldering away in the earth after his death in 1921, they had it embalmed by a special process to preserve it indefinitely. The corpse of the famous singer still lies in a glass-covered casket in a mausoleum near Naples wrapped in an American flag.

Clothing on the body is changed every three years.

Gratitude Easy Virtue

As gratitude is a necessary and a glorious, so also is it an obvious, a cheap, and an easy virtue—so obvious that wherever there is life there is place for it, so cheap that the covetous man may be grateful with out expense, and so easy that the sluggard may be so likewise without labor.

STAR DUST

MOVIE AND RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

I HOPE you heard ZaSu Pitts when she did "Dulcy" on the radio; it was a relief to hear her and not one of her imitators. Incidentally, she's quite interested in those girls who do impersonations of her; says she's always wanted to hear one, but somehow she just never has.

And I wish you might know that same ZaSu Pitts; you'd like her so much. She journeyed to New York to do that broadcast, and spent most of her time shopping for her children—her daughter, who is thirteen, and her adopted son (Barbara Lamarr's little boy, you'll recall), who is a little younger. She started out at the crack of dawn each morning and was on hand when the stores opened, to buy simple frocks and sweaters and suits. And very smart she looked, too, dressed in dark blue—her favorite color.

She was besieged with offers to do more broadcasts; Ben Bernie, for one, wanted her on his program. She was urged to go on the stage; one remarkably good offer was made for her to do a sketch in a new show—but she turned them all down. Wanted to go home to her family. For she's a family woman; children and husband come first, and her career afterward.

ZaSu Pitts.

Nancy Carroll seems to have sidetracked her screen career in favor of night clubs. She is seen about a lot, looking a bit plump.

Have you heard that early, early morning program on the radio—the Milkmen's Matinee? It's very popular, not only with the milkmen, but also at open-all-night lunch carts, and lots of requests pour in for special numbers.

Remember Julia Faye, without whom no DeMille picture was complete in the old days? She recently married a scenario writer, in California.

Major Bowes' genial "All right, all right" is fast becoming a byword all over the country; one of our best football announcers loves to use it. Incidentally, honors are being heaped on the Major so fast that it's hard to keep track of them. Recently a new wing of the Kerlan Hospital for Crippled Children, in Baltimore, was dedicated to him.

Well, we had our Dickens cycle in pictures (and it isn't over yet, apparently, for W. C. Fields will probably do "Pickwick Papers"), and now we're in for a round of Kipling, "The Light that Failed," "Kim" and "Captains Courageous" being the first of his stories to reach the screen. And unless Paramount's Gary Cooper plays the hero in the first named of these, there's no justice.

Paramount will cast Charles Boyer opposite Marlene Dietrich in "Invitation to Happiness." Welcome news to all the Boyer enthusiasts, isn't it? Perhaps he'll inspire Marlene to greater heights.

Leslie Howard wants Anita Louise to go to New York to play "Ophelia" to his "Hamlet" on the stage. Well, she'd look too lovely for words, but whether or not she could handle the role is something else again. However, the talented Howard doesn't usually make mistakes.

Fred MacMurray's rapid climb to the movie heights should encourage everyone who wants to go into the movies. Two years ago he couldn't get even an extra job. One year ago he worked in "The Gilded Lily," along with Claudette Colbert, the first screen work he'd had except for a small part in "Grand Old Girl" with May Robson. Since then he's been rushed from one picture to another, because you and I and all the people like us liked him. He's played opposite Katharine Hepburn, Carole Lombard and Claudette Colbert again.

Fred MacMurray.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Wallace Beery is doing excerpts from his pictures on the air, and it looks as if Sophie Tucker would do the roles played by Marie Dressler . . . When rehearsing for a broadcast, Joan Bennett wore bedroom slippers . . . Under similar circumstances, Joan Crawford worked in her stocking feet . . . All the interviewers are cheering for Eleanor Powell, because she's so likeable . . . Connie Boswell is back on the air, after a long absence, but her sisters aren't . . . The French Academy decorated Frank Black for giving us so many French compositions on the air . . . All the movie companies want Joe Louis, who defeated Max Baer.

Sugar Causes Brilliant Leaf Colors of Autumn

It's not an early frost, as commonly supposed, that produces the most colorful autumn leaves, says the United States Forest Service. It's a late frost—and the sugar in the leaf—that gives us the brilliant colors. Just the right combination of temperature and moisture is needed. The best colors come when the thermometer doesn't quite reach the freezing point for several weeks during the latter part of September and through October.

Silviculturists explain that before the leaves fall a layer of cells forms at the base of the leaf, which ultimately loosens the leaf, and when it drops off, forms a scar. If frost doesn't arrive too soon, this layer forms early and quickly. It holds more sugar in the leaf and the sweet sap causes the brilliant reds and oranges and yellows that delight the eye. This is not only true of the gorgeous sugar maples in the north but of most of the colorful hardwood trees—the oaks, elms, birches, other maples, sweet gum, black gum, hickory, dogwood, and many others. When frost comes too early the leaves dry and lose their sugar before they have time to take on high color.

Women should take only liquid laxatives

MORE people could feel fine, be fit and regular, if they would only follow the rule of doctors and hospitals in relieving constipation.

Never take any laxative that is harsh in action. Or one, the dose of which can't be exactly measured. Doctors know the danger if this rule is violated. They use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why it should be a liquid like Syrup Pepsin.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if it doesn't give you absolute relief, if it isn't a joy and comfort in the way it overcomes biliousness due to constipation, your money back.

Do You Ever Wonder

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE?

Ask Your Doctor and Find Out

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this—and see that you get what you want.

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

DO you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination, headache, dizziness, loss of energy, leg pains, swellings and puffiness under the eyes? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unwell and don't know what is wrong?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They are recommended the world over. You can get the genuine, time-tested Doan's at any drug store.

Good Thoughts for Good People

Let praise—I say, not merely thanksgiving, but praise — always form an ingredient in your prayers — In praise, the thought of self vanishes from and is extinguished in the mind, and therefore to be large and fervent in praise counteracts the natural tendency to selfishness which is found in men's prayers.

—Edward M. Coulburn.

I am a rational creature, and I ought to praise God: this is my work; I do it nor will I desert my post, so long as I am allowed to keep it; and I exhort you to join in this same song.

—Epictetus, "Discourses"

A grateful heart, a garden is, Where there is always room For every lovely, God-like grace To come to perfect bloom.

—Ethel W. Dennis.

Some day all men will rejoice that God, good, is the Supreme Ruler; and even now, as the divine power, and presence are understood and realized, comfort, healing, and supply are made manifest. The way to obtain divine blessings and to enjoy freedom and happiness is through right thinking and right living. What a great sense of joy may daily accompany our waking thoughts if they are filled with glad anticipation, and if we sing with Psalmist (Psalms 118) "This is the day which the Lord hath made; we will rejoice and be glad in it"! Let us claim our sonship with God and realize that nothing can alter the fact that we are always in the presence of our heavenly Father and therefore can rejoice and sing for we are under His tender, loving care. —The Christian Science Monitor.

The Lord reigneth; let the earth rejoice. —Psams 97.

JOE E. BROWN'S LATEST HIT 'BRIGHT LIGHTS' AT PARTHENON FOR 4 DAYS STARTING SAT.

Joe E. Brown, the funnel-mouthed comedian, comes to the Parthenon theatre Saturday for four days in what is heralded as his most uproarious comedy romance.

In addition to Joe's laugh-provoking stunts, there are four lively songs, for the picture is one of back stage life and the singing comes in naturally.

Joe E., himself, sings and dances and does acrobatic stunts with the famous Maxellos.

Scores of pretty chorus and dancing girls appear in the theatrical sequences but "Bright Lights" is neither a musical or a farce, but a stirring romantic comedy.

The story is by Lois Leeson and concerns Joe E.'s quick jump from a burlesque comedy troupe to a big Broadway actor, playing with a madcap heiress, Patricia Ellis, out for adventure. His wife and partner in the burlesque show, Ann Dvorak, is out of it and goes back to small time.

Joe's head swells which causes many complications which lead to a unique and amazing climax.

Brown himself started his theatrical life as a comedian in a burlesque show, and the burlesque sequences are made the more natural by the use of an entire troupe which was playing in Los Angeles when "Bright Lights" was being filmed.

The cast includes William Gargan, Joseph Cawthorn, Henry O'Neill, Arthur Treacher, Gordon Westcott, Joseph Crehan and William Demarest. Busby Berkeley directed.

Who Are You? The Romance of Your Name

By RUBY HASKINS ELLIS

A Gardiner?

THE watchword of the Gardiners and Gardiners, "Praesto pro patria" ("I stand for my country"), as their history will show, has been like a burning torch held high in every generation of this splendid family.

The principal family of Gardiners in this country derive their descent from Lion Gardiner, a native of Scotland, who served under General Fairfax as an engineer in the Low Counties. He was sent to America in 1635 by the Lords Say, Sele and Brooke, to build a fort on their grant of land at the mouth of the Connecticut river. This he did and called the fort Saybrook, in honor of his patrons. His eldest son, David, born in Saybrook in 1636, was the first white child born in the Connecticut colony.

Lion Gardiner bought from the Indians an island in Long Island sound, called by the English Isle of Wight, paying for it a black dog, a gun and some Dutch blankets. Here he settled with his family and called it "Gardiners Island." This island remained in possession of the family for many generations.

The original Gardiners and Gardiners seem to have used the same coat of arms and both spellings of the name, so it is believed that in the beginning they were the same family. Even in America, both houses use the same arms. The above reproduction represents the arms of Joseph Gardiner of Rhode Island. He came to America by way of Holland in 1650 or 1651. His father was Sir Thomas Gardiner, who fought in the army of Charles I.

A Graham?

FEW indeed are the families who can boast of a name of greater antiquity or historical renown than the Grahams. The name is Scotch and is derived from one Greme, who was regent of Scotland during the minority of Eugene II, in the year 419. Greme took his name from the Anglo-Saxon "grim," meaning surly or sullen, not a very attractive attribute, but perhaps they interpreted it as one having a stern and courageous look.

The story is that the founder of the family of Greme, a great warrior, breached the wall which fore-ran the Roman occupation of Scotland. In later times a chieftain of the Grahams was a loyal supporter of Sir William Wallace, who succeeded in freeing Scotland from the English yoke, and at the famous battle of Fodden Field the loyal head of the house of Graham fell by the side of his king.

This family has always been a powerful one in its native Scotland, owning many vast estates, lordships and dukedoms and earldoms. The earl of Montrose was

OF COURSE we call him Beezer Bertie on account of his nose. Not because it's so big but because what's left of it is jammed plumb deep into his mug.

It was way back the year when Man o' War copped the Futurity Stakes at Belmont. Bertie was only a kid, then, though he already stood six foot two and topped the scales at 210 stripped. He'd been following the hides since he was a shaver and had worked his way up from swipes to usher in the field stand. But that wasn't enough to satisfy Bertie; like all of us when we're maidens, he figured he was due to lick the world.

That's the season he meets up with Mudder McMork and me. Mudder takes one look at the boy standing over eighteen hands high and says: "The tracks is no place for big bozos like you, kid. What was you planning on doing with yourself when you grow up?"

"Why," Bertie tells him, "I was thinking on going to college." "College!" laughs Mudder. "What great man ever went to college—outside of me?"

"You!" I busts out. "Why, you was thrown out of school because you couldn't learn to write your own monicker!"

"I'll have to tighten your snaffle," says Mudder to me. "Why, I was quarterback at Concordia college for thirteen seasons."

"And I'll put a grand on the line," I says, "that you was still a freshman."

"That's neither there nor here," Mudder cuts me out. "What we got to do is take this kid and give him a head start in life. Listen, son, can you use your mitts at all?"

For answer Bertie makes a swing which goes wild, and after Mudder picks himself up off the turf and dusts his britches, he says to me: "Man, from now on we got a staker in our stable what's going to cop us plenty cherries."

"What kind of sappy idea you got in your skull now?" I asks him.

Girl's Fatal Beauty Causes Seven Deaths

Belgrade.—Seven men have died because of the beauty of a young Albanian girl in the frontier village of Vusanja, Jugoslavia.

The girl, Fatima Balldelitch, in 1928 violated the custom of her district by marrying some one in her own village. Up to that time there had been no intermarriage in the village, but a young man in the neighborhood, Shaban Shuti, fell violently in love with the girl and they were married despite the opposition of relatives and public opinion.

The union so offended the feelings of the girl's brothers, that one of them, Suljo, killed his brother-in-law.

In the feud which followed between the families seven men have now been killed.

allied with the Stuart cause and paid the penalty with his life on the scaffold in 1660. In Scotland "the great Montrose" is an imperishable memory of its history.

The plaid of the Grahams (all prominent Scottish families belonged to a clan and each clan had its characteristic plaid) is in blue, black and gray. Their war cry was "Killecranle," and their badge was laurel.

Among the earliest American settlers of this family was Benjamin Graham, who located in Hartford, Conn. James Graham was an attorney general, of Boston, Mass.

William Graham was the founder of the first classical school in the South, which is now known as Washington and Lee university, in Lexington, Va.

THE CRIMSON STAIN

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

At the funeral service of the celebrated cartoonist, Mr. Sidney Smith, author of "The Gumps," the officiating minister sent a challenge directly home to the hearts of every person in attendance at that service. It was an appeal for less reckless automobile driving. The death of Mr. Smith added one more to the roll of those killed in automobile accidents.

On October 29, 1935, the total killed for this year in Cook county, Illinois, alone, was 795 persons. The total number killed in the United States averages about 36,000 persons, annually. This, of course, does not take into account the vast army, numbering hundreds of thousands of persons, who have been incapacitated for work. Add to this, the suffering and deprivation of those who were dependent for support upon those made cripples for life, and we have a shocking and goes in the ring all I got to do is think of all the horses I was chambermaid for and I gets mad enough to bust a lion on the bezer."

But I ain't going to describe that fight again because it was too terrific. Sufficient to say that it's still thirty seconds to the gong in the first round and Bertie sure looks like the favorite, when Killer Kelly lifts a haymaker all the way from the mat, swings it around over his head, and lands it smack in the middle of Bertie's kisser. Bertie looks terrible surprised for a second and then goes down for the count of a million.

Well, when Killer Kelly and his gang has gone with the kitty and the arena is empty, Bertie opens one eye and asks us what hit him. I had found out by that time, and when I tells him, he says: "If that's what happens in the fight racket, take me back to the turf, boys, and let a kind old swayback step in my face." With that he passes out again for three days.

And that's why we call him Beezer Bertie; because his nose is now only a memory, 'count of Killer Kelly carried a horseshoe in his glove.

heart breaking picture of the crimson stain which stretches across our country.

Some people think statistics are cheap. Perhaps they are; but the flagrancy of this crimson stain can be told in no better way than in terms of figures. From the sinking of the Titanic to the recent wreck of the airship Akron, six catastrophes have occurred which have killed 3,152 persons. But, this "same number of people lose their lives in auto accidents every 36 days." From 1919 to the close of 1933, in the United States alone, there were 348,406 automobile deaths. One might argue that the cause of these fatalities was defective parts in the cars themselves, but this idea is at once dismissed when we remember that 92.4 per cent of cars in accidents were in good condition and less than one-half of one per cent were due to defective mechanism. We are informed that 84 per cent of accidents occur in clear weather, leaving 16 per cent for foggy weather and winter's snow and sleet; 74 per cent occur on dry surfaced roads, leaving 26 per cent for slippery roads; all of which clearly indicates that the cause of this "crimson stain" is nothing but reckless, careless, thoughtless driving.

It is high time that this menace be regarded as a moral problem, and that the solution be found in an appeal to the conscience of every person driving a car. Let conscience compel obedience to this resolution: "I will observe the Golden Rule."

Rhode Island's Capital

Rhode Island in its early days had almost as many capitals as it had towns, as the general assembly met in circuit, first in one town and then in another. Finally, notes a writer in the Philadelphia Inquirer, with the growth of the assembly the meeting places were reduced to two places, Providence and Newport, as the cities which could take care of so many extra people. For many years these two capitals were retained with the legislature opening its annual session in May at Newport, and after a few days adjourning for a more extended one at Providence, which began the following January. Since 1900 the legislature has met at Providence and the state's constitution was so amended as to dispense with the Newport session.

The Way to Deal with Enemies

Matthew 5, 43-48
 43. Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor, and hate thine enemy. 44. But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you; 45. That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust. 46. For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do no even the publicans the same? 47. And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? do not even the publicans so? Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.

President Roosevelt approved a program submitted by the Department of Public Works and buildings for Illinois last week, which approval makes possible the expenditure of $10,307,184 of the funds previously apportioned to Illinois by the secretary of agriculture, for the elimination of hazardous grade crossings. This approval exhausted Illinois allotment for this purpose.

The projects are divided into the following classes: 31 projects on Federal aid roads; 14 within municipalities but not on Federal aid roads and ten outside of municipalities on secondary or feeder roads.

The elimination of dangerous crossings in each case will be accomplished by the erection of super-structures and the changing of the course of the highway.
