ACCEPT BID ON DISPOSAL PLANT AT SPECIAL MEET

GO FORWARD WITH PLANS ON WATER WORKS EXTENSION

Bids were let on the erection of the sewage disposal plant, pending the approval of the PWA, a site purchased for the water works, a bond issue approved, and bids asked on water works extension, at the special meeting of the village council held last Thursday night at the village hall.

A motion to accept the bid of the Sides Construction Company on the sewage disposal and treatment plant, as per 9C plans and specifications was made by Mr. Canaga and passed the council by unanimous vote.

This bid on the 9C plans and specifications was in the amount of $72,244.00 and was accepted by the local council subject to the approval of the PWA authorities, the PWA having allowed an outright grant of funds amounting to approximately 45 per cent of the cost of constructing the plant. A motion that as much brick as possible be used in the construction of the plant was made and passed directly following the accepting of the Sides company bid.

The amount of the contract for the construction of the plant was pared somewhat from the original alternate bids, the board having eliminated some details of the plans.

Water Bond Contract

A contract was submitted by John A. Smith, representative of the H. B. LaRocco Company, covering the sale of the 4½ per cent water revenue bonds. This contract was given the approval of the trustees.

The bond issued covered by the contract was in the amount of $75,000, these funds to be used in financing the new water works extension, whereby the village will obtain its water supply from the city of Hammond. The contract made provision for the setting aside of a certain percentage of the revenue from the water in a maintenance fund and it also provided for the deposit of funds for the retirement of the bonds at maturity date.

To Purchase Site

The committee reported having located a desirable site for the location of the new water reservoir, pump house and meter vault, and the council passed a resolution for the purchase of this site.

The site is located at Wentworth avenue between the river and the old road that is 172nd Street, and is a part of the Ellen Dolton estate. The resolution provided for the payment of $4000 for the site.

Ask Bids on Water Extension

A motion was also passed to advertise for bids on the water works extension construction, and December 10 was set as the date of

VROOM—HOHMANS WED. THANKSGIVING

The wedding of Miss Bessie Vroom and Mr. James Hohman was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Vroom of Munster, Thanksgiving evening with Rev. Monsma reading the single ring ceremony.

Immediate relatives of the bride and groom witnessed the service which was followed directly with a wedding supper. The young couple plan to make their home in Munster where the groom is engaged in a truck farming business.

STRUCK BY CAR FEAR KIDNAPED

It took police almost three hours to locate Mrs. Jessie Hoogveen, 67 year old Oak Glen woman, after she had been carried away by a motorist whose car struck her as she was crossing the street at Torrence and Indiana Avenue.

The accident occurred about 5:40 Sunday evening, and the driver of the car, Christ Kalemba of Chicago Heights later explained that his one idea was to get the woman to a doctor, so he picked her up and drove on to South Chicago where he finally located a doctor and acting on instructions of the doctor took her to the county hospital, where she was found by local police.

The Kalemba car was traced by Officer Van Laningham through the license number which was noted by John Weise when the driver paused to pick up his victim.

Mrs. Hoogveen is still confined to the hospital suffering from abdominal injuries and a badly bruised leg.

GEO. BRASCHLER WED RECENTLY

Mr. George Braschler of Harvey and manager of the local A. and P. store, tells us that he was recently married, his bride the former June Bultman of Dolton. The wedding was quietly performed at the home of the bride's parents, with only a few friends and relatives present.

Mr. and Mrs. Braschler plan to make their home in Lansing in the near future.

Due to a recent concession on the part of the WPA the village is to receive a grant of $17,551 to be used in the building of the new reservoir, pump house and water extension system, but under terms of the grant the work on the project must be started by December 15 unless further time is allowed by the WPA, so the matter has to be pushed through rapidly.

This concluded the business for which the special session of the council was called.

REV. ROZEBOOM HERE TWO YEARS

Sunday, November 24, marked the second anniversary of the Rev. G. J. Rozeboom's coming to Lansing as pastor of the First Reformed church. During this two years a spirit of harmony has prevailed in the parish and much good work has been done.

Rev. Rozeboom has delivered 201 sermons from the Lansing pulpit, never having had to miss a service because of illness. He has baptized 64 persons, received 48 by confession of their faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and taken in 35 members by letter from other churches, and released 14 members by letter to other churches.

There have been 18 deaths from this congregation during these two years. The present enrollment of the church numbers 910 persons; 237 families, 488 members and 422 baptized members.

HARRY FADLER HELD FOR COUNTY COURT

Harry Fadler, 28, driver of the car in which his father, Herman met his death in a crash November 1, was ordered held for trial in Cook County Criminal court by Magistrate Sherrow on charges of involuntary manslaughter and reckless driving.

Fadler was allowed to remain at liberty under $1000 bond pending the trial.

Fadler's machine crashed into another car driven by Charles Nadgeman, of Hammond, on Torrence Avenue near the Pennsylvania railroad, injuring Nadgeman, Miss Jean Nielson, a dancer, and two other occupants in his own machine. Fadler was also slightly injured.

Fadler admitted at the coroner's inquest in Hammond that he had been drinking before the collision, which occurred when he attempted to pass a machine driven by William Schultz, also of Lansing.

NEW CITIZENS

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kelderman announce the birth of a baby boy Saturday, November 23.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rottier of Highland, Ind., announce the birth of a baby boy, born November 16. It has been named Peter Eugene.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kingma of Rochelle, Ill., announce the birth of a baby boy, born November 9. It has been named John Albert. The baby has one sister, Anne, who is three and one half years old. Mr. Kingma is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Vander Linden of Wentworth avenue and is well known in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. John Tilges announce the birth of a daughter at St. Margaret's hospital Tuesday, November 26.

REDUCTION MADE ON CHURCH DEBT

Through the cooperative efforts of the various organizations of the First Reformed Church, a general debt in the amount of $4500 the first of the year, was reduced in the spring by the amount of $1300 and reports made last week shows another $1200 on hand to be applied on this debt.

The minister, Rev. Rozeboom, and the officers of the church feel very gratified with the spirit and cooperation that has made this financial advance possible.

PADGEN GIVEN 105 DAYS IN JAIL

Chasing his father with a butcher knife proved a rather expensive pastime for Mike Padgen Wednesday when the judge fined him $100 and costs for the experiment in delinquency.

This was not Mike's first offense, or his first appearance before the judge, but it will be his first taste of real retribution for a long series of breaches of conduct.

Following an argument in which Mike threatened his father with a butcher knife, Mr. Padgen preferred charges of disorderly conduct against his 18 year old son and Justice of the Peace Dockweiler fined the young man $100 and costs, which fine he was of course unable to pay and so has to work it out in the county jail, 105 days of it.

Mike has been brought before Judge Sherrow twice on similar complaints before this offense, and received severe reprimands, being released on his promise to go straight, but the third time his promises were of no avail.

HITS ENGINE-- DRIVER IS HURT

Louis Mazar of Chicago is still in St. Margaret's hospital suffering from a concussion of the brain as the result of his driving his Dodge truck directly into the engine of a moving train on the Grand Trunk tracks just south of the village at the Burnham Avenue crossing Saturday afternoon.

The accident occurred about 1:30 p. m. and the exact cause is unknown. The Mazar truck hit the engine with enough force to break the steam valve and disable the engine as well as completely wrecking the automobile which was tossed into the ditch by the side of the road.

After being picked from the wreckage, Mazar was taken to St. Margaret's by Officer Van Laningham where it was found he had suffered a concussion of the brain.

The engine of the train was so badly damaged that another engine had to be sent out to pull the train.

P T A CARNIVAL BIG SUCCESS

Lansing's 1935 PTA carnival which was held last Friday night at the Coolidge school proved most successful from the entertainment angle as well as for profit to the organization according to the returns that are in at present.

The carnival, held on a different plan from that employed for several years, yielded a larger financial return. Approximately $277.15 was the gross returns with the expenses well under the $100 mark. Much of the material used was donated, which increased the profit for the PTA.

A large portion of the credit for the success of the affair is due the merchants and local officials who so generously donated materials and used the advertising booth space.

The booths this year were attractively arranged around the walls of the gym with the refreshment tables under a colorful paper canopy.

A number of gifts were given by the merchants at their booths. Pierce Lee and Laura VanderAa were both made happy with a Mickey Mouse wrist watch, a gift from George Dockweiler. George also gave away twenty four Eversharp pencils to as many fortunate girls and boys.

Gustav Bock, Inc., presented Mrs. R. Martin with a bright new electric iron, Jerome Weinberg with a toy dog and Richard Wright with a Mickey Mouse toy. The Henry Bock's Sons store awarded an electric ironer to Edward Redman, and the grand gift of the evening, a Thanksgiving turkey, went to John Keen of Oak Glen.

A large amount of the funds obtained from the carnival will be used by the PTA to purchase reading circle books for the schools and to provide other extra curricular supplies.

A meeting of the organization's board was held Monday night to take care of the details relative to the carnival and prepare reports to be presented at the regular meeting of the association which is to be held Tuesday evening, December 3, at the Coolidge school. Mrs. Roe, president of the PTA announced at this meeting that Mrs. J. C. Dycus of Hammond who is active in state PTA work would be present at the regular meeting to address the members on the advantages of belonging to the state association.

WIERSMA—SEEMAN NUPTIALS WEDNESDAY

Mr. Richard Seeman of Lansing and Miss Ada Wiersma were united in marriage Wednesday evening, November 27, at the home of the bride's father, Mr. Hans Wiersma, of South Holland. The young couple have taken an apartment in Bock's building in Oak Glen and will be at home to their friends there.

White Clothes, Warm Climates

In bright sunshine white clothes are cooler than dark ones, as the white material reflects more light. Closely woven white fabrics are worn in tropical countries to protect the body from the hot sun, preventing the transmission of ultraviolet rays to the skin. There is also to be considered the psychological effect of white clothes, white having been associated so much with coolness.

A RELIGIOUS THOUGHT

The following excerpts from the letter of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., explaining his withdrawal of support to the unified budget of the Northern Baptist Convention, we think is most expressive and shows an unusual discernment of the modern need in religious effort, so we pass them on to our readers with gratitude for the unity of ideals they convey:

"Hereafter, such sums as I may donate to general religious work, it is my present thought to contribute to specific projects, chiefly interdenominational or non-denominational in character, which interpret the Christian task in the light of present day needs and which are based not so much on denominational affiliation as on broad, forward-looking principles of cooperation."

"What gives me pause is the tendency inherent in denominations to emphasize the form instead of the substance, the denominational peculiarity instead of the oneness of Christian purpose. I have long felt this denominational emphasis is a divisive force in the progress of organized Christian work and an obstacle to the development of the spirit and life of Christ among men. My faith is increasingly centered on the few fundamental principles of Christ's life and teaching as set forth in the Four Gospels. I believe these principles can be applied with practical vision and spiritual power."

"If the church is to go forward, if it is to hold the young people of today who, generally speaking, are not greatly concerned about denominational distinctions and have a decreasing interest in sectarian missions and if their support of its activities is to replace that of older givers who pass on, these denominational distinctions are bound to fade in the forward movement of a great united church open to all who seek to follow Christ and to find in Him the abundant life. Such a church will, I believe, meet the needs of young people and enlist their support of its missions at home and abroad. We of the older generation should not discourage them or be instrumental in lessening their interest by passing on the divisive elements of our present day religion. Rather should we work with them in relegating the non-essentials to a place of secondary importance and stand with them for the fundamentals of Christian unity, feeling confident that on such a foundation they will rear a church far better adapted to the requirements of their day and generation than any we could build for them."

"Relating this statement of my personal view and interest to present general trends, I am sure you will understand the action which I have taken. It does not indicate any lessening of my interest in religion and the Christian church. On the contrary, it springs from a deeper and growing desire to encourage and further those united and non-sectarian activities and agencies which emphasize above all else unity in Christian service, love for God as He is revealed in Christ and His living spirit, and the vital translation of this love into Christ-like living. I am therefore seeking to use such influence as I have in emphasizing the basic truths common to all denominations, in lowering denominational barriers and in promoting effective cooperation among Christians of whatever Creed. Definitely to support such cooperative movements seems to be the next step for me to take in that direction."

TODAY

The New Deal meets highly formidable opposition in Washington and elsewhere. Corporations increasingly disregard debatable regulations. Many foods companies will fight the AAA in the Supreme Court on Dec. 9. Louisiana rice millers will fight collection of the processing taxes. Pittsburgh coal companies will fight the Guffey Act. Consolidated Gas of New York and subsidiaries decide not to register under the utilities holding act. Meanwhile, first returns come in from the Literary Digest poll. The first 40,000 ballots from five southern and western states show 46.72 per cent for New Deal, 53.28 per cent against. The 1934 Digest poll showed 61.15 for New Deal. The New Deal proposals, brilliant in their promises, apparently have not satisfied in the performance as the months have gone along—Obviously the Roosevelt policies have never been under a heavier strain than at the year's close.

EXTRA EXTRA

Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving as an official holiday comes but once a year but the words of a beloved hymn serve to remind us that we have constant cause for thanksgiving:

"Our gratitude is riches,
 Complaint is poverty,
 Our trials bloom in blessings
 They test our constancy.
 O, Life from joy is minted
 An everlasting gold,
 True gladness is the treasure
 That grateful hearts will hold."
 True thanksgiving is our expression of gratitude, and genuine gratitude truly multiplies the things we have to be thankful for.

Our Compliments

To that bunch of high school kids on the good looking and really worthwhile little newspaper the "Thorntonian" they are putting out this year, and particularly do we admire the "what it takes" qualities possessed by some of the boys who give so much of their time to seeing that every thing is just right about the paper. A foundation for future success, we hope.

As We Were Saying

All is not serene that appears calm seems to be manifested lately in more than one circle, to-wit: the PTA, locally speaking and a lot more combinations of the alphabet nationally speaking, meaning the contradictory statements regards the just past elections about the country, and lastly the distress amidst Illinois state Republican Editorial Association, it seems the boys are feeling alarm that the "Dumerats" have pulled a fast one on them and stand a good chance of naming the republican candidates for state office as well as their own democratic candidates. The vicissitudes of "Polyticking."

A Remarkable Thing

Is the turn of the wheel of chance and how things work out at times, 'fer 'instance' the height of something or other as demonstrated the other evening when Jerome Weinberg's name was drawn for the awarding of second gift by Gustav Bock. But Gus and Jerome went through with the thing with colors flying and now all that remains is for Van to collect the dog tax. We would have to think of tax when we think of some people. Anyway it was a good dog.

To, George Mills

The word means: "Taking exception; one that receives, as a ground for painting; an inert substance used in preparing remedies in order to give them a suitable form or consistency." Now who knows what the word is?

Wondering

If the "speaker of the house" will back me in the statement that I only ate 4 pieces of that candy. Eddie says I had a dozen. Impossible.

Just how irritating an invitation to go for a walk can be to the modern miss.

If Johnny Welse can get the numbers on the dice as accurately as on an auto license.

How important 4 dates in one evening have to be to make a man forget the furnace fire? And Gus a furnace man at that.

If Howard Bertram realized that the lady mistook him for the "mayor" of the town.

If Harold Clark is brushing up on his adjectives this week.

Parting Shot

Evidently Mr. Mitchell likes this thing, and we try to be obliging whenever possible.

"Scrambled Comics"—Here's a new game for both young and old. It's fun and pays $100 in cash prizes. For details see next Sunday's Chicago Herald and Examiner. Don't miss it!

"Government" today requires higher and higher standards of those who would serve it—We must be loyal not merely to person or parties, but to the higher conception of ability and devotion that modern government requires." — President Roosevelt.

THE STORY FROM THE OPENING CHAPTER

At the inquest into the death of John Mason, banker, Jean, daughter of Campo Ragland, owner of the Bar Hook ranch, where Mason met death surreptitiously passes to Kentucky Jones the bullet which had killed Mason, she having abstracted it from the evidence. Kentucky goes to work on the Bar Hook ranch. The Mason verdict is accidental death. Bob Elliott, owner of the "88" ranch, adjoining the Bar Hook, drives his cattle on the Bar Hook land. Lee Bishop, Ragland's ranch boss, expostulates, and Bill McCord, Elliott's foreman, insults him. Bishop and Jones are astounded by Ragland's indifference to Elliott's action. Jones tells Jean Elliott knows she perjured the bullet at the inquest, which Jones has got rid of. Her reaction mystifies him. Zack Sanders, cook at the Bar Hook ranch, is found dead, murdered. Sheriff Hopper announces his knowledge that Mason also was murdered in a gun fight with riders of the "88" ranch Jim Humphreys; Bar Hook cowboy, is killed, and Billy Petersen wounded. Jones sends for fighting cowmen, but Ragland countermands the order. Jones seeks to trace the ownership of a gun found on Zack Sanders, as a bearing on the mystery. Jean sells him her share in the Bar Hook ranch, thus giving him a free hand with Elliott. Jones finds proof that Jean has concealed evidence connected with Mason's death. A gunsmith whom he had engaged to trace Sanders' gun says he sold the weapon to a Bar Hook cowboy, Joe St. Marie. Jones questions St. Marie without avail. Lee Bishop goes "gunning" for McCord. Knowing Bishop will not be given fair play, Jones sets out after him. The foreman is shot from ambush. Jones carries him to shelter Bishop dies.

Her words tumbled out of her incoherently. "It's because Bob Elliott was close to the Bar Hook when Mason was killed. Poor Lee Bishop knew that—though I don't think he knew that he knew it."

Kentucky Jones said, "Bishop told me that he knew."

"And now," said Jean, "now I've got to tell you that I've known this all along—almost from the first. And I—"

"You're sure you want to tell me this, Jean?"

"All right," he said. "What, exactly, is Bob Elliott holding over your father?"

"Somehow he's guessed the truth: that whoever killed Mason killed him with my father's rifle. I knew that when I put the bullet into your hand at the inquest; I've known for days that you must know that, too, though you said nothing to me."

"Yes," he admitted, "I figured out that."

"And Bob Elliott knows it—I'm certain he knows it. Though I swear I don't know how he is so sure."

"But you yourself are sure that it is true—that the murderer used your father's rifle?"

"The—the—yes; I'm virtually certain of that. And my father knows it. He—"

"Have you talked this over with him?"

"No—how could I? It's changed him so I hardly know him. He used to have a terrible fighting temper—but where is it now? He doesn't dare come to a showdown with Elliott; he's afraid of the effect the shock would have on my mother."

"And on you?"

"On my mother," she repeated. "He doesn't dare face it out because of her. But just as he won't fight Elliott because of that—something in his makeup keeps him from protecting himself, too. Nothing would bring him to hide evidence—though that evidence might turn against him, as well as against the true murderer. He must have known—"

"Then," said Kentucky, "his alibi—about being somewhere else at the time Mason was killed—is not so good as some people have been led to suppose?"

"He hasn't any testimony in support of it but mine. They'll discount that, because I'm his daughter; even—even if they don't break my testimony in some other way."

He did not stop to tell her that he knew by this that her support of Campo's alibi had been perjury. Instead he asked her, "How many people know that Campo—your father—set out to kill Bob Elliott the day Mason was killed?"

She cried out with a shudder in her voice, "You even know that?"

"Bob Elliott told me that," he said shortly.

Jean Ragland looked dizzy, and sick. "Then who can tell how many people Bob Elliott has told?"

"And how many people," Kentucky said slowly, "do you think can tell a living man from a ghost?"

Her voice quavered irregularly, no longer fully under her control. "What do you mean?"

"There used to be a picture hanging in the Bar Hook ranch house," Kentucky said. "A picture in a dark wood frame. That picture was stolen because somebody thought it had something to do with the Mason case. When you saw that picture was stolen, you were panic-stricken, and hid the empty frame from your father. Now I'm going to tell you what that picture was."

"You can't—you never saw—"

"It was a picture of a man on a horse. When you first looked at that picture it seemed to be an enlarged snapshot of Bob Elliott. Only—when you looked close, it was not Elliott, but John Mason. Do you deny that, Jean?"

"No," said Jean miserably. "You see? It's just as I said. Nothing escapes you, nothing's able to hide itself away from you. That—that's the rest of the case against my father. Lee Bishop didn't know who it was he saw near the Bar Hook when he thought he saw Mason, and Joe St. Marie only thought he saw Mason's ghost. But—when they rested sideways in their saddles with their faces hidden, a long way off or in the dark—anybody could—could mistake Bob Elliott for Mason."

"Or," he said, "an angry man might—just possibly—mistake Mason for Elliott."

She stared at him blankly for a long moment. "Oh, dear Lord," she said at last in a broken voice. "Why did I ever try to hide anything from you?" She did not avert her face from him, sitting very straight in the saddle. "Yes, I hid it. Campo must have known at once that Mason was killed with his rifle; but do you think anything in the world could have persuaded him to do away with that rifle, to pitch it into the bottom of some canyon?"

Watching her face in half profile he saw her begin to cry, silently, and without tears. "Is that all?" he said.

"That's one side of it." She stood tied herself.

"And what's the other side?"

"The other side is that he—she thinks that—that you might have killed Mason, Kentucky."

He said slowly, "Jean, are you lying to me?"

She rushed ahead, a little of her color returning. "With everything against my father, what could I do but keep silent?"

"And hide what evidence you could," said Kentucky. "And now you want me to jump this country."

"For—our own sake," she said quickly. "I swear to G—d, Kentucky, it's for the very own sake I want you to do that. All the time he's spent in Waterman, when we didn't know what he was doing, he's been trying to build a case against you."

Everybody knows you were at the house at about the time Mason was killed. Campo's figured all along that only one thing was lacking—to implicate you so deeply in the death of Mason that you could never—"

"And that one thing lacking was my reason for killing Mason."

"Yes, of course—and now he thinks he has it."

"Jean, do you think he believes I killed Mason?"

This time she averted her face; when she spoke her voice was hardly audible. "I only know that he would be glad to believe it—if he could."

"If he could," repeated Kentucky. He turned his horse toward the Bar Hook with a savage twist of the bit.

Jean cried out, "Where are you going?"

"I'm going to hang me the man that killed Old Ironsides."

"Kentucky, wait!" She booted her horse against his and caught his arm in both hands. "Kentucky, if it weren't for me you'd never have been in this. This isn't your fight—it's never been your fight. It's mine and my father's. You're not tied into it as we are. You—"

"I'm tied into it now."

"No, no! Take your horse and ride out. Take—"

"I'll go," he told her, "when I've done this job of work. I'm going to clear this thing if it splits the rim rock wide open."

CHAPTER XI

KENTUCKY JONES came into the Bar Hook layout on the dead run, dropped off his horse at the door and went pushing into the house. He made his way straight to the little crank-sided wall telephone, and belled Waterman.

It was one of the deputies who after a prolonged delay, finally an-svered from Sheriff Hopper's office.

"What Do You Mean?"

"Talking from the Bar Hook," Kentucky said. "Has Sheriff Hopper left yet?"

"Yeah, he left about three minutes ago. Wait, now! Yeah, there goes his car by, in the street."

"Run out and catch him," Kentucky yelled into the phone. "Shout your lungs out—but stop aim!"

There followed a protracted wait it seemed to Kentucky Jones that an hour passed while he stood at the telephone waiting for the deputy to return. But the wire opened again at last, and it was not the deputy who came back to the phone.

"This is Floyd Hopper speaking," said the small voice from Waterman. "Who's that?"

"This is Kentucky Jones at the Bar Hook."

"Oh, yeah? What the h—l do you want?"

"I've found out something. Do as I say and you'll have your man in six hours."

"Why the devil should I do like you say?" came Hopper's voice, sourly.

"I'll give you proof," said Kentucky. "If I'm wrong you can tell me to go to h—l. All I ask is that you test it for yourself."

"And when is all this going to be?" said the sheriff.

"Right now," said Kentucky. "You can shake down the proof of what I know in less than five minutes from right where you sit. Have you got the bullets that killed Zack Sanders?"

"Of course I've got 'em!"

"And you've got the gun that was found in Sanders' hand?"

"Well?"

"Take the bullets that killed Sanders and compare them with the gun that was in Zack Sanders' hand when he was found dead. You'll find that Zack Sanders was killed with the gun that was found in his own hand."

An instant's pause was followed by an oath that scorched the wires. "Jones, you fool with me—by G—d I'll learn you to fool with me!"

"All I say is look at 'em! It won't cost you the time it took me to get you on the telephone. I'm giving you your chance to get the man that killed Mason. You can do what you want to about it."

"I suppose," came Hopper's voice, "you figure Zack Sanders committed suicide?"

"Take a look," Kentucky repeated. "Fire a bullet from Zack's gun and match it against those he was killed with. If I'm right call me back, and I'll give you the lay. Otherwise, you can go lamming around here blind until it's too late—It's all one to me." Kentucky Jones smashed the receiver onto the hook.

He turned to find Campo Ragland standing in the doorway.

"I heard what you said over the phone just now," Campo's voice was lowered; but he sounded as if he had accused Kentucky of misbranding a calf.

"I knew you were listening. I heard you come in."

"I suppose," said Campo, "you've got more guts than any man on the face of this rocky up-ended earth!"

"I've heard tell that the West is dead," Jones said. "And I always thought that was funny, with the lands still here, and the cattle, and the riders working in the saddle like they always worked. But when the owner of a brand sets to working in the dark, and shoves one of his own riders into the noose because he's afraid to face out the music himself—I guess the West is gone, all right."

"You hear me? I've found out what you supposed nobody would ever find out. I found out that you had more reason to kill Mason than any living man."

"And I'll make it easy for you," said Kentucky. "I'll admit it."

Ragland stared at him a moment, thunder-struck. "You—you—what?"

Suddenly Kentucky laughed in his face, silently, with an ugly twist of the mouth. "You're a fool, Campo," he said.

Campo Ragland blew up. "I've stood enough," he shouted, his voice rising in a shuddering gust. He snatched up Kentucky's gun belt and tried to thrust it into his hands.

"Take your gun belt, and I'll give you the break! Take it and draw!"

"And if I don't," said Kentucky. "Then I'll see you crack your neck at the end of a rope!"

There was a small sound behind Campo Ragland, voiced inarticulate, like a word that had tried to make itself heard and could not. Looking past Campo, Kentucky saw that Jean was standing there, in the doorway where her father had stood.

Her words broke throatily. Jerked and twisted, forced their way out against an all but overmastering emotion.

Yet they carried no inflection of appeal, but instead were blither with an insupportable conviction.

"No! No, no, no! You'll never do that!"

"You needn't fret yourself," said Kentucky. "You're never going to get a night out of me, Campo."

Campo said, "I expect not. But if you're holding off because you're gone on my girl, you can pick your gun belt up again. Because no d—n sneaking killer is fit to so much as walk where her shadow's been."

In the little pause Kentucky heard the outer door of the kitchen open and close, and knew that Jean had come. "Maybe you're right," he said. "Maybe I couldn't ever bring myself to gun you, because of the reason you've named. Maybe, if it wasn't for just that one thing, you'd have been talking for your life, Campo, these many days ago."

Campo Ragland's voice rose hard and tight. "If you think you can—" He checked himself.

"I don't think about what I could have done, because that's past. But I'm asking myself why you don't sing mighty small."

"What's the meaning of that?" Ragland snarled.

"I'll give you just one little pointer as to what's the meaning of that. Where's the rifle that killed John Mason? You don't know. But I know! And I could lay hands on it now."

The rounded receding sweep of Campo's forehead was marked with tortuous distended veins that stood out in bold relief in the unfavorable slant of the light.

"Bring it out, then," Campo cried out. "If you think I'm afraid to have that rifle brought out—"

"No," said Kentucky. "It isn't me that you're afraid of. It wasn't that, that sent you prowling around in the dark trying to find a way to deliver up another man. It's the man that's swamping your range, while you sit by and watch your riders go out and get shot."

"If you mean I'm afraid of Bob Elliott," said Campo, "you lie, and I put it to your face. And when it comes to you—come out with what you've got, and all you've got! I'd rather be dead than think you'd back from it for the sake of—of the reason you're trying to make me think."

"Put that reason out of your head," said Kentucky. "When this thing's over I'm going to turn my back on the batch of you, and move on."

"No," said Campo, his voice very deep and strong, but shaken with a repressed turbulence. "You'll never be moving on." He came into the room and stood close in front of Kentucky, red-eyed as a roused bear. "Not any more," he said. "You hear me? I've found out what you supposed nobody would ever find out. I found out that you had more reason to kill Mason than any living man."

"And I'll make it easy for you," said Kentucky. "I'll admit it."

Ragland stared at him a moment, thunder-struck. "You—you—what?"

Suddenly Kentucky laughed in his face, silently, with an ugly twist of the mouth. "You're a fool, Campo," he said.

Charm, Romance in Evening Dress

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IF THE revival of the luxurious, the more elegant, the romantic, the dramatic, the glamorous in fashion indicates a turning of the tide as they say it does, from a season of depression to an era of prosperity and good times, then indeed have we cause to rejoice for the present signs in the matter of opulent dress are most propitious.

The new fashions, especially formal modes, are not only glamorous and elegant beyond anything known for years but they add to their fascination in that they seem to have recaptured the glories, the poetry, the vision and the imagination, the art, as expressed in lovely apparel created throughout the ages.

At a recent style showing given by the Chicago wholesale market council the gowns for formal wear, three of which are herewith illustrated, confirmed the feeling that we are entering a fashion era wherein a new spirit of elegance pervades.

Eloquent of classic beauty and statuesque dignity which carries the grace of sculptural lines are the new evening gowns of Grecian inspiration. Extreme interpretations of modes a la Grecque are seen in the draped themes of Vinnet and other Paris designers. Long flowing scarfs, huge wing sleeves, draped side pleatings are all shown in the new soft quality-kind silk crepes and velvets. Other gowns show skirts pleated all around of floating billowy masses of chiffon, or slim dresses with draperies (often pleated) in long cascades from the shoulder, to form a short train at the side or back.

Sumptuous fabrics, for which the present season is noted, bespeak the rich beauty of Italian influence, especially the magnificent velvets in warm deep purples and reds and greens, such as have lived through the centuries in old master paintings and frescoes.

The versatility of the present mode would make it appear as if Oriental princesses had come to life, in the new harem drapes and metal cloth turbans and sari scarfs and head coverings. Persian colorings and patternings, Chinese embroideries carry the spirit of the Far East into the immediate fashion program. Then there is the Russian influence which was an all-important influence on current style trends, as manifest in the smart high cossack turbans and fur bordered tunic blouses and coats and suits.

Of course we must not neglect to make mention of the picturesque robe de style gowns which have and are bringing so much of romance into the modern fashion picture. In these you may be as bouffant and rococo as were lovely ladies in the king's court in olden days of pomp and glory when George the Fourth was king.

Speaking of the bouffant we are minded to call your attention to the charming dress centered in the illustration. It demonstrated at first glance to the audience gathered at the style revue held in Chicago, the fact of high quality emphasized in a superb taffeta glistening with metallized highlights. To the right, in the picture, is a very lovely evening ensemble fashioned of one of the new rapturous, scintillating silver lame weaves such as are so smartly in vogue this season. Its styling accents a to-be-envied slenderized figure. Front skirt fullness, high-front, halter-neck bodice, extreme low-back decolletage, jeweled belt buckle are all highspots of note. To the left, a gown of pearl dot satin bespeaks Grecian inspiration via heavy golden cords and tassels.

Tailor-Made Influence Is Shown in Evening Gowns

Paradoxical as it may seem, the tailor-made influence has extended to dinner gowns this year. Worth launches wool-back silk velvet in dinner tailleurs with wrap-around skirts and bloused bodices, and Patou and Schiaparelli also favor evening tailleurs in silk velvet.

No Sleeves

Something new in fur wraps is a sleeveless one of seal. Two large fur buttons anchor it down on one shoulder. Worn over a brilliant color dress, it makes an elegant costume.

Fashion Notes

The Italian influence which is running away with most fall fashions is even making itself felt in coliffures, according to recent dispatches from Paris.

Jeweled touches include handsome jeweled or enameled belts or embroidered ones which various leading designers sponsor.

Taffeta is the most popular material in Paris. It is used for dresses, evening coats and capes, for gloves and evening petticoats.

Almost as sheer as lisle are the soft wool sweaters imported from Austria for the especial delight of school and college girls.

Many of the smart new silk dresses are in those lovely jewel tones of ruby, sapphire, amethyst and emerald.

Even sweaters gleam with metal. Sweater blouses in bright or dark colors are threaded with a "tinsel" design.

BOYS AND GIRLS CLUBS DELIVER 46 BASKETS

The Boys and Girls Clubs of Thornton Fractional delivered 46 baskets on Wednesday to needy families in Calumet City, Burnham and Lansing. The gift baskets contained fruits, meat, vegetables, jellies, etc., in sufficient quantity to provide for Thanksgiving dinner.

For several years this practice has been going on at the high school but never before have the students contributed so generously. Previously, the largest number of dinner baskets sent out was 38.

NEAR TWO HUNDRED PRESENT AT DANCE

The Girls Club-dance at Thornton Fractional was a distinct success. Nearly two hundred were present.

In addition to the fact that every one appeared in a sweater, the unique decorations were very colorful. Walls were lined with the names of prominent T. F. football players and school posters.

First prize, given for the most beautiful sweater worn at the party, was won by Isabel Swedens. Her sweater was hand-knit and blue.

NEW BUILDING BOASTS MANY IMPROVEMENTS

In the new Thornton Fractional building which is near completion, students will find a number of noteworthy classroom improvements.

Each will have solid oak doors with translucent glass. Inside, the blackboards will occupy only the front of each room.

The typing room will accommodate 85 machines, and in the rear of the room will be facilities for washing hands before typing.

The mechanical drawing room will have a special, dark, blue-print room for developing the prints.

Students taking swimming will have to take a shower before entering the pool, and go through a specially prepared solution which will check the spread of athlete's foot.

Along the spacious halls, more than twice as large as the old ones, will be beautiful, black drinking fountains, placed in tiny alcoves.

Twelve hundred lockers, a locker for each student, will be located in large alcoves in the walls.

There will be very few along the hall.

SENIOR GIRLS CHAMPION VOLLEYBALL PLAYER

The senior girls are the champion volleyball players at Thornton Fractional. They won that honor last Saturday at the Burnham school when they defeated each of the other classes in round robin tournament.

Close behind, and undefeated until their final game against the seniors, came the juniors. The sophomores took third, while the freshmen, largely because of inexperience, were unable to win a game.

The outstanding tournament players were selected for the varsity team by Miss Adeline Jaacks, physical education director. They were Abhinak, Brady, Bukolt, Conner, Heigl, Kmatz, Lenhoff, Schomaker, Wells and Zimmerman.

Peace in the World

THE question of peace has never more insistently occupied men's attention than it does today. And yet, in spite of all the thought that is being given to this question, peace seems still afar off.

We have advanced to the point of looking for a world peace—a comprehensive peace—but mankind generally does not understand the idea of peace in its essence. Apart from the multiplicity of problems to be resolved into harmony, there is a complexity of beliefs regarding what constitutes peace. Men believe there are many phases of peace—the peace of the individual, of the home, of industry, of the nation.

Peace is not primarily the absence of sickness, the elimination of strife in the home or society, nor the absence of war among the nations. The absence of these things is assured as peace is gained, but is not peace in itself, for peace is the realization of the omnipresence of God, good. All strife is strife within the human so-called mind, strife as between the highest good realizable and something lower than the best.

Even when two or more individuals seem to be engaged in strife the problem is reducible to the conflict between good and evil within the consciousness of those concerned. If good predominates in one's consciousness the strife will in that measure diminish; for whilst hate cannot cure hate, nor selfishness eliminate selfishness, the substitution of love for hate, and unselfishness for selfishness, must finally bring about a complete cessation of clamor for all. Mary Baker Eddy says in her Message to The Mother Church for 1909 (p. 8), "When a man begins to quarrel with himself he stops quarrelling with others." The quarrel with himself is the strife of good with evil, the strife of the higher with the lower; and it is a strife which can have but one end, namely, peace, for the divine Mind consciously expressed dissipates and destroys that which is unreal and false.

Just as strife touches only the so-called human mind, so peace is realized only as the presence of God, divine Mind, is understood. The realization of peace, the peace of God, and men today must find that peace before they can find its effects, either individually, in the home, in business, in social circles, or in international questions.

They men say that peace depends upon the turn of events in the world's affairs—events such as partial or total disarmament, or upon other international questions of the moment. Peace, however, does not depend upon these events; these events depend upon humanity's realization of peace. The world is where it is today because peace as the result of knowing God is not generally realized. Mankind is not yet awake to the real meaning of peace, and no fully satisfactory result can possibly be reached until the peoples of the world realize that peace does not depend upon single or contingent events, but on the presence of God in the heart.

Every man who turns away from contention and strife in the human field and holds his thought unreservedly to God, will find peace from all the strife which seems to rage about him. He will find his feet on the rock which cannot be moved, for he will be supported and sustained by the infinite God. This assuredly is the meaning of Christ Jesus' statement: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." (John 14:27). The issues of the nations can be resolved only as this peace is understood; and each man who seeks, finds, and holds fast to the presence of the infinite is doing much to promote world peace.

The question arises, if the other man does not—ease to oppose, is he to have the advantage of his contention? . . . The wrong qualities which lead to strife are the opposites of the attributes of God, and they fall powerless before the demonstration of God's presence as Love. Seeing through the mist of evil and beholding only

God, good, in his neighbor, one will find indeed that only God is there, and that man is undisturbed by any evil force. This is the demonstration of Christian Science, the realization of God as ever present and all-powerful. It is the demonstration of peace in the individual heart; and because nations are composed of individuals it is by right thinking about God and about peace that peace will come to a troubled world.—The Christian Science Monitor.

Good Thoughts for Good People

"I forgive but I cannot forget," is only another way of saying, "I cannot forgive."
—Henry Ward Beecher.

Give me the charity which delights not in exposing the weakness of others, but covereth all things.
—Henry Drummond.

We have cause to suspect our religion if it does not make us gentle and forbearing and forgiving; if the love of our Lord does not so flood our hearts as to cleanse them of all bitterness, and spite and wrath. If a man is nursing anger, if he is letting his mind become a nest of foul passions and evil wishing, how dwelleth the love of God in him?
—Hugh Black.

To one who may be struggling with a sense of having been wronged, the admonition of Christ Jesus "Love your enemies," may seem well-nigh impossible of achievement, but Jesus knew that there could be no progress along spiritual lines while one was hating or fearing an enemy. He knew there could be no real joy or satisfaction while one was at variance with another or seeking revenge for a supposed wrong—Let the one who is making a heroic effort to forgive humanly, try the divine, the Christianly scientific way. That is, let him begin to think from the standpoint of omnipresent Love, enfolding all in a love so divine, so pure, that it knows neither enmity nor hurt. Then if he will see his real self as the reflection of omniscient Love, he will see that he must manifest the same qualities, if he is to be true to his sonship and worthy of God's love.—The Christian Science Monitor.

Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you; That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven.—Matthew 5.

STATE CAUTIONS MOTORISTS

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 27.—Motorists of Illinois were urged to come to a complete stop at highway intersections and to exercise more caution in observing stop lights in a safety bulletin issued today by Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes.

"Statistics indicate," the bulletin said, "that only about one-third of Illinois automobile drivers come to a complete stop at highway intersections where there are stop signs, and one per cent run the red lights."

"This carelessness on the part of some motorists," said Mr. Hughes, "presents an alarming picture of indifference. Very often pedestrians are the innocent victims of these careless drivers."

"The safe way to pass through an intersection equipped with light signals is to wait for the proper clearance, indicated by the green light. When the light shows red—stop. Red is a danger signal and should never be ignored. The amber light is a warning and is timed for clearance of the crossing."

"Some motorists upon reaching a stop sign on a highway have the habit of slowly edging onto the main artery. This is dangerous and may result in serious mishap."

"It has been estimated that from seven to ten percent of all traffic accidents result from failure to grant the right of way or to stop at stop signs. Most of these accidents result in serious consequences

"Special Agent" Thrilling Story of 'T-Men' with Geo Brent-Bette Davis at Parthenon Saturday

Bette Davis and George Brent, again paired as screen lovers in "Special Agent," a Warner Bros. picture, will open at the Parthenon Theatre Saturday.

The picture is said to reveal the inner workings of the U. S. Treasury Department, showing an entirely new angle of the Government's activities in wiping out the nation's public enemies.

The story is crammed with tense dramatic situations in which secret service operatives face death in order to run down criminals and see evidence to convict them. Thrilling adventure and daring exploits follow every step of the secret operatives in their battle with the "killers."

Brent, in the role of a newspaper reporter on a New York daily, also allied with the government as an undercover man, is trying to get evidence against the crooks and at the same time prevent the murder of Miss Davis, his sweetheart, who unwittingly has taken a job as the personal secretary to the head of the band.

The polished, but ruthless killer is played by Ricardo Cortez. Others in the cast include Jack LaRue, Henry O'Neill, Robert Strange, Joseph Crehan, J. Carroll Nash and Robert Barrat. The picture was directed by William Keighley from the screen play by Laird Doyle and Abem Finkel, based on the story idea by Martin Mooney.

POOR LIGHTING CAUSE OF MANY ACCIDENTS

The automobile, with its terrible slaughter of 36,000 people last year, exceeded by only a thousand or so the number of fatalities that occurred in homes, according to a report by a large life insurance company. In the entire United States, 34,500 deaths resulted from injuries in the home last year.

These facts were brought out by Mr. Oscar P. Cleaver, nationally known lighting engineer, in a recent address before the New Jersey State Safety Conference. Mr. Cleaver said further: "The risk of injury in the home is almost seven times as great as when riding in public conveyances. Brutal though it may seem, 'Home Sweet Home' is one of the most dangerous spots on earth.

"Since 44 per cent of domestic accidents are estimated to be the result of falls, artificial lighting obviously plays a most important part in home safety. In fact, inadequate illumination is a prolific cause of stairway tumbles, especially on the cellar stairs. Porch steps also take their toll. Stumbling over unseen objects in a dark house is generally the cause of needless injuries."

The number of accidents in the home can be reduced by care on the part of the family, and by better lighting, Mr. Cleaver concluded. To him the home is no different than the street when accidents are concerned, except that in the former place accidents do not happen—they are committed. "Light protects the home from many if not the majority of accidents there, and at the same time it safeguards the eyesight and the health of the home as well."

EVER since "It Happened One Night" was such a success the film companies have been trying to catch that same happy combination. Paramount has done pretty well, in "Hands Across the Table," with Carole Lombard and Fred McMurray—perhaps you heard that bit of it that they broadcast some time ago. It's a good picture. "Mutiny on the Bounty" is another one. Just by way of relief, that one doesn't belong to the "It Happened One Night" school. "She Couldn't Take It" is another effort to repeat the popular success; it's the story of the gangster who retires, and becomes guardian of another man's family, with George Raft as the gangster and Joan Bennett as the lovely heroine. Incidentally, Joan was in New York, helping to celebrate the arrival of another son in the family of her sister and brother-in-law, Barbara Bennett and Morton Downey—and is Downey a happy man these days! Singing like the birds—and not just before a microphone.

Once again the motion picture industry is wondering if Samuel Goldwyn has second sight when it comes to sizing up talent; he has developed so many stars that his failure in the case of Anna Sten really doesn't count.

This time it's Frank Shields, the tennis player who's to be Goldwyn material. Tall, dark, handsome and temperamental, Shields was one of the best American tennis players for years—and made an excellent showing at Forest Hills this year.

Lake Tana: the Ethiopian Birthplace of Blue Nile

Among the chief interests of Great Britain in Ethiopia is Lake Tana, the source of the Blue Nile river which, with the White Nile, furnishes the needed water for the irrigation system of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

"The Blue Nile, which joins the White Nile at Khartoum in the Sudan, is deeper and swifter than the White Nile and brings more and richer silt to the Sudan and the Delta," says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Near Sennar, the Blue Nile has been dammed, and water from the reservoir flows out in a network of large and small canals across the Gezira. This triangular-shaped plain wedged between the White and Blue Niles is one of the most fertile areas in Africa, abundantly producing grain and long staple cotton.

"The Sennar dam impounds about 140,000 million gallons of water. Plans are under way to build another dam at the Blue Nile's outlet from Lake Tana. While this would impound for low years a large reserve supply of water by causing the lake's level to rise, it would not diminish the amount of sediment carried into the Gezira, for the water leaves the lake clear, and becomes turbid only in the Blue Nile gorge after receiving numerous silt-carrying tributaries.

"During the rainy season, streams in the Ethiopian plateau flowing into Lake Tana cause the lake level to rise and the water to overflow with increased volume into the Blue Nile.

"Lake Tana is roughly heart shaped and is about 40 miles long by 30 miles wide. It is sunk in a depression 2,500 feet deep, in the Ethiopian plateau. The lake probably derived its name from one of the many small islands that dot its surface: Tana Kirkos Island. On this island, the Ark of the Covenant, when brought from Jerusalem by Menelik I, is supposed to have been kept for several centuries before being taken to Aksum.

Floating out over its green waves come quavering tones of church bells from the numerous churches and old monasteries on the islands. Some of these were built by Portuguese Jesuits in the Seventeenth century.

"On the plains among palm trees and acacias, huddle native villages of thatched huts, whose inhabitants are chiefly farmers and cattle raisers.

"In the marshes grow papyrus plants, which the natives fashion into inferior string, and canoe-shaped rafts. Portions of the lake shores are the favorite haunts of hippopotamuses, which Waifo tribesmen kill for food.

"Leaving Lake Tana, the Blue Nile didn't seem to get anywhere, and they finally let him go.

He met Mr. Goldwyn later at a party—and the first thing he knew, he'd signed a new contract. Maybe as an actor he's just a swell tennis player, and maybe he's star material. But Goldwyn has a way of being right.

flows out through marshes, and thence through narrow channels among reefs, whose proximity to each other would facilitate the building of the proposed new dam. About 21 miles below the lake's outlet, the river suddenly drops 80 feet in the beautiful Tisessat falls.

"Near the falls, mule caravans cross the river on an old stone bridge built by early Portuguese explorers. Farther down the river they built another bridge. Below that one there is no bridge across the Blue Nile until hundreds of miles farther down, where the Sennar dam takes the railroad across."

"After the Blue Nile plunges down the Tisessat falls, it enters mountains, through which it has cut a deep gorge, longer than the Grand Canyon. The river winds its way among these mountains almost to the edge of the Sudan plain."

Ponder Over Why and For What We Live, Advises Historian

"Perhaps it would be a good idea, fantastically it sounds, to muffle every telephone, stop every motor and halt all activity for an hour some day, to give people a chance to ponder for a few minutes on what it is all about, why they are living, and what they really want."

The historian, James Truslow Adams, is the author of those words. I believe they are great words, which should be passed on to every one who can read them. So says a woman writer of note.

To ponder on what it's all about, why we are living, and what we really want!

If every one of us periodically had an opportunity, or were led by circumstances, such as a complete stopping for a certain time of all activity to stop and give thought of that kind, what might not be the result?

It might solve all our problems—it might bring us happiness.

Are not all our problems questions of human relationships of one kind or another—of our standing with other people on the road we are so

Use One Batter for Many Cakes

May Be Done by Adding to Mixture and Varying the Frosting.

A single cake batter can be given such variety that it would scarcely seem that different recipes were not used. Let us take the regulation 1-2-3-4 cake recipe and see how it can be done by adding to the mixture and by diversifying frostings. When a woman wishes to entertain without too much effort in the refreshments, she will find the ways described helpful.

1-2-3-4 Cake.

1 cup butter 2 cups flour
2 cups sugar 4 eggs

Also one cup sweet milk and one teaspoon vanilla or other flavoring. Cream butter. Add sugar gradually while creaming butter, add beaten egg yolks, then the flour and milk alternately and vanilla. Add one-half teaspoon salt and two level teaspoons baking powder to the flour before sifting into cake. Beat well and fold in whites of eggs beaten dry.

Chocolate Cake.

Divide the batter in half and to one portion add one square (or more if wanted) chocolate melted and mixed with a little cold milk to a paste. This will give plain and chocolate cake from same mixture.

Three Cakes From Same Batter.

Separate the cake batter into three portions, one leave plain, one make into chocolate cake, and the third into citron, date or raisin cake by adding the fruits named. Bake in individual cup cake tins.

Variety by Frostings.

Use the same mixture plain or in any or all of the varieties given, make any favorite plain frosting or use the following recipe:

2 tablespoons cream or rich milk
Confectioners' sugar

Flavoring

Add sugar gradually to the cream and stir until smooth and the right consistency to spread.

Colors and Cakes.

Frost chocolate cake with white icing, and white with chocolate frosting, which can be made by adding melted chocolate to part of the above recipe. Flavor white with almond, and chocolate with vanilla extract. Or, if made into small cakes, frost some white cake with white frosting, some with chocolate, and frost chocolate cakes in the two ways. Top chocolate cakes with half nut-meats and white cakes with candied or maraschino cherries.

From Your Doctor if the "Pain" Remedy You Take Is Safe.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

The proper treatment for a bilious child

THREE STEPS TO RELIEVING CONSTIPATION

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

ANY mother knows the reason when her child stops playing, eats little, is hard to manage. Constipation. But what a pity so few know the sensible way to set things right!

The ordinary laxatives, of even ordinary strength, must be carefully regulated as to dosage.

A liquid laxative is the answer. This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

The doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. It is best for their use. It is best for home use. The liquid laxative most families use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Any druggist has it.

It begins to look as if "Little Lord Fauntleroy" would be quite a picture, with Freddie Bartholomew as the hero, Jackie Cooper playing a second small boy and C. Aubrey Smith and Dolores Costello supporting them.

Seems that there were complaints because every Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers picture had practically the same story. So now we're promised that when "Follow the Fleet" is finished (and can you see the nimble-footed Fred as a tough job?) they'll do an original called "I Won't Dance" which has a new story; in other words, the program's going to be different! Or if you're a Bing Crosby fan and want to know what HIS plans are, so far as pictures are concerned, here's what Paramount has lined up for him for the next year: "Turn Off the Moon."

A Gilpin?

THE vicious-looking wild boar on the shield below owes the perpetuation of his beauty to the first-known ancestor of the Gilpin family, who put an end to his devastating pilgrimages in the counties of Cumberland and Westmoreland, England. For this feat of daring Richard de Gilpin was granted the right to use the boar on his coat of arms.

Richard was of Norman-French birth, as the "de" in his name signifies. He was secretary and ad-

It was the Baron of Kendal who granted to Richard de Gilpin the estate of Kentmere, in Westmoreland county, Kentmere hall, the ancestral home, still stands.

Thomas Gilpin, of Warborough, father of the founder of the American family, was a colonel on the Republican side in the Battle of Worcester during the time of Cromwell.

Joseph Gilpin, the founder of the name in America, came to this country with William Penn and settled in New Castle, Del. His wife was Hannah Glover. Their family of sixteen children is evidence of a great number of descendants living in various states today. Many of them are in Kentucky. George Gilpin, a descendant of Joseph, who lived in Alexandria, Va., was a close personal friend of George Washington and served as colonel of militia. Henry D. Gilpin, of Philadelphia, was an eminent representative of the Pennsylvania branch. A profound scholar, he held many important posts, being attorney general of the United States under President Van Buren in 1840.

This family is characterized by its longevity and large families.

Within the period of Daniel Boone's excursions into the wilds of Kentucky, many of the Gilpin men were found among those sturdy pioneers.

A Savage?

"WHEN Captain Newport sailed up the James river for the first time he found upon its shores the 'gentle savage' to welcome him. We still have the Savages with us after 300 years, but not the dusky sons of the unknown forests."

English parish registers of Somerset county record a number of Savages during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. On account of religious differences these people sought other homes, and in America most of them settled in the New England states, principally Massachusetts and Connecticut. Some of them located in Rhode Island.

In 1654 John Thomas Savage was a Freeholder of Middletown, Conn.

THE CRIMSON STAIN

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

The appeal for volunteers in the late war was met not only by a large number of young men who enthusiastically contributed their services, but by a much smaller group who steadfastly refused, for conscience sake, to bear arms. At the time these men were branded as pacifists and were looked upon as cowards, shirkers, unpatriotic, and unworthy of the privileges of American citizenship. The sobering and painful experiences through which we have passed since Armistice day may cause us to inquire seriously: Was the pacifist altogether wrong? The experiences of the last decade have led many to interpret conditions in a far different light than during the crucial years of the war period. We are now inquiring in all seriousness: Was the pacifist right?

Let the Unknown Soldier speak. Were his voice audible, we might hear him thus speak—I gave my life to make the world safe for democracy. It is no more safe today than when I went overseas. For what purpose did I fight? Whom did I serve? Was it all a hideous mistake that I made the supreme sacrifice? What is our honest and unprejudiced answer? We might, also, hear him speak like this—Never again. Edith Cavell was right; patriotism is not enough. The only way to put an end to war is to refuse to fight. Let the forces opposed to war organize to resist militarism. You cannot settle the question by mere argument, but it can be settled by the creation of a better social order, composed of right-minded people who in peace organize for the purpose of abolishing war.

Is the pacifist right when he tells us we must take pacifism out of the clouds of sentiment and make it a part of our practical politics? Is he right when he steadfastly and conscientiously affirms that war is wrong; socially, morally wrong, and therefore, has no place in a Christian civilization? Is he right when he affirms his intolerance with the theory of non-resistance to evil, and at the same moment hastens to argue that there are other ways of settling international disputes than by the shedding of blood?

The causes of war are primarily economic and social. These problems can and must be solved on the basis of an authorized system of Christian ideals. There is no other alternative. We must fight war with principles and not with swords. It is the task of no mere conscripted group, but of all of us who claim the right and privileges of citizenship.

The Rendezvous

By CAROLINE OSBORN

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

CELIA BROWN slipped into the seat at the small table she invariably chose at the Daffodil. As usual she waited a few moments before raising her eyes to the corner near the window where she would find the young man.

Celia always thought of him as "the young man" because she did not know his name and he was obviously very young—oh, much younger than she.

Celia was forty. She had never had a romance in her life nor held a baby in her arms. She had long been a columnist on a metropolitan daily and now and then wrote little human stories with strong heart interest what appeared in a corner of her paper. She also contributed articles regularly for the woman's page on the care and feeding of infants.

She lived alone in a tiny bedroom, bath and kitchenette apartment away up town and left the office every day at the same hour to come to the attractive lunchroom she had discovered tucked away in a side street.

It was here that Celia had first seen the young man. He was about six and twenty she thought, broad-shouldered, blond and blue-eyed. He had attracted her attention from the day she beheld him seated at the table in the corner consuming sandwiches and drinking large cups of coffee. His eyes were particularly noticeable since they rarely left her face while she occupied herself busily with her modest meal. After the third day of his rather glamorous presence at the same table Celia had found herself looking at him. Apparently he had contracted a similar habit. "The rendezvous," was what she secretly called it.

Today, on meeting those steady blue eyes, Celia was conscious of an unfamiliar fluttering in the region of her heart, color rushed to her cheeks, something quivered in her throat.

Was he admiring her, she wondered? Was he falling for her, too? In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love—but they are nothing compared to the verdant hopes that may suddenly, with very little encouragement, blossom in the heart of a maiden of forty.

Wild fancies flitted through the newspaper woman's active brain as she sat there nervously turning over a bit of omelet. Never before had a man looked at her like this. Suppose he should speak to her—to her, Celia Brown, a respectable spinster, with a record at the office for never falling austerly and unbending dignity.

Perhaps she was about to enter into a beautiful romance—at last! Timidly she raised her eyes and met those of the handsome young man. His gaze encountered hers across the empty dishes and he smiled boyishly.

When she saw the smile Celia rose and fled. Her heart was beating tumultuously. She was very pale as she paid her check at the desk and hurried from the demoralizing atmosphere of the "Daffodil." Of course now he would speak to her. That would be the next step in her wonderful adventure. That is, if she ever went back. Would she dare go back? That was an unanswered question.

All afternoon she banged the typewriter and tried to quell the thrilling warmth that pervaded her soul. He was so handsome, so virile and so intelligent looking!

On Saturday, after she had checked up on the sad, tear-compelling feature stories she had written for Mother's day, this coming Sunday, she left the office early and went home. Celia was glad of tomorrow's respite from work, for she never went to the lunchroom on Sunday. It was devoted to visiting her friends and relatives, usually lunching up in Westchester with a prosperous aunt.

She would have time in the interval to plan a course of action to meet or repel any further advances of the handsome stranger.

But awakening on Sunday at the late hour of a holiday morning she found her problem awaiting her. A smart ring at the bell of the tiny apartment brought her out of bed to open the door to a diminutive messenger boy, his freckled face hidden behind a huge uncovered basket of dewy daffodils tied with a gauzy yellow ribbon.

"For me?" asked Celia incredulously, and shut the door quickly as she took the gift, but not before the sharp eyes of the child had observed her confused look of pleasure and consternation.

There was a note attached to a tall stem. She tore it open with cold trembling fingers and gazed at the firm script.

"Dear Lady of the Daffodil: "Will you graciously accept this offering from one whose mother you so greatly resemble that it has been a joy just to sit and look at you? My beloved mother is gone but in her memory it comforts me to send these flowers to you who might be my own mother returned to life.

"HER SON."

Columbus Cathedral in Havana

The Columbus cathedral in Havana is situated in Cathedral square, at the foot of Empedrado street. It is the center of all important religious ceremonies held under the Spanish domination, and it maintains as its most valued tradition the fact that it held within its walls the body of Christopher Columbus. The body was removed to Seville when Spanish rule ended in Cuba. There is a contention, of course, that the real Columbus relics are buried in Santo Domingo and that those once interred in Havana were the remains of Diego Columbus, brother of the discoverer.

REAL ENJOYMENT

"Yes, sir, it was just about the ideal vacation. Nothing to do but loll around all day in comfortable chairs. No mosquitoes, no insects of any kind. Pleasant, smiling people on all sides. No bills running up, no relatives, no sunburn. "Just peace and quiet all day long. A thorough rest for the mind and body—the kind of vacation you've always dreamed about. "Yes, sir, it was ideal. We certainly enjoyed that vacation the boss took."—Judge.

Highly Entertaining

"What time did you say the next train comes in?" asked a small boy of the family waiting in the little depot. "I've told you it comes at 4:44, half a dozen times," the elderly station agent answered impatiently. "Can't you remember that?" "Oh, I can remember the time all right," said the little rascal, "I just like to see your whiskers wobble when you say '4:44'."

OVERLOOKED

Realtor—Now here's a beautiful home overlooking the lake. Buyer—Where's the lake? Realtor — That's what's overlooked.

PROFIT AND LOSS

"I never thought a boy of mine would turn out that way." "What's the matter?" "I sent him to college and he'd rather get his lessons than make the football team."

THE IRK IN WORK

"Allo, Bill! I haven't seen you for weeks—." Bill's pal stopped suddenly. "But wot's wrong, man? You're looking mighty seedy. Been ill, eh?" he asked. Bill passed a horny hand across his brow. "No," Bill sighed. "I ain't been ill. It's work wot's doing for me—work from seven in the morning till six at night, and only one hour off. Think of it, mate!" "Well, well!" replied the other. "And 'ow long 'ave you been there?" "I ain't been there yet," retorted Bill. "I begin tomorrer," he added gloomily.—Everybody's Weekly.
